The Miracle of the Blacksmith

You have seen a chain, every link welded and moulded by the deft hands of some grimy blacksmith? Every link with that certain twist, not a flaw in any or all of them, doing every day hard work with top-loads. He, who makes such a chain, is a Master Mechanic and worthy of his hire.

Your career is not unlike such a chain; if each part is securely welded and moulded, so it will not give way when strained or jarred, you are your own master-mechanic.

A Savings Account in this bank makes one of the strongest links in your career. Start one and make it stronger from day to day.

Warm spring days will soon be here—melancholy days for the mother who tries to keep a sturdy youngster of three or four in clean clothes from sun-up to sun-down. The little two-piece suit on Sonnybud above is easy to launder and easy to make. For a stroll on a bright afternoon dotted Swiss motif is quite the thing for Sonnybud's sister. It is quite fetching if trimmed in bonnie blue ribbons, Irish crochet lace, with a hat to match.
