

People Here and There

Dr. O. E. Holt, local osteopath, attended the osteopathic convention in Walla Walla yesterday.

Are Pendleton people honest? A local man says they are. He left a large Indian robe in the back seat of his car which was parked on Main street last night and found the robe in the machine this morning.

Miss Irene Hawkins is doing a little Americanization work for one of Uncle Sam's new nephews. She is teaching English to Ung Gim Poy, 14 year old Chinese youngster who came to Pendleton recently to join his father, Urd D. Goev.

Frank Branch Riley, who spoke at the Pendleton Commercial Association banquet last night, was formerly in the abstracting business in Portland and Oregon City. When the Abstracters Association of Oregon was formed, Mr. Riley was its first secretary-treasurer.

The trains do not run fast enough to take Dan Clark through without a stop-off in Pendleton. He is here today between trains while enroute to Omaha for a conference with officials of the Union Pacific system. Dan's business is to get more livestock business for the O. W. R. & N. and to see that the shipments of livestock are well cared for.

NELSON COULD HARDLY PUT ON HIS COAT

"Rheumatism Certainly Had Me In Its Clutches," Says Seattle Man—Tanlac Restores Him.

"There isn't any mistake about it, this Tanlac hasn't an equal," said C. A. Nelson, 424 Harrison St., Seattle. Mr. Nelson is employed by the city of Seattle as an acetylene welder. To quote his words:
"I had trouble with my stomach and sometimes I had awful spells of indigestion, but my main trouble was rheumatism. It certainly had me in its clutches. My arms, legs and shoulders hurt me so bad I could hardly stand it, especially in damp weather.

I suffered agony every time I dressed myself and it was all I could do to get on my coat. The pains just traveled around my body, first one place and then another. Sometimes my back hurt so I couldn't stoop over and straighten up again without suffering torture. I didn't get much sleep, either.

"But Tanlac drove the rheumatism right out of my system, put my stomach in apple-pie order and made me feel like a new man. I haven't a pain or an ache and have gained ten pounds in weight. I sleep all night without turning over once and feel fine in the morning. Tanlac is far and away the best medicine I ever heard of. It certainly does the work."
Tanlac is sold in Pendleton by Thompson Brothers.

HOME OF JOHNSON WILL BE RESERVED

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 23.—(A. P.)—A dilapidated little building at Greenville, in Eastern Tennessee, upon the front of which once hung the sign: "A Johnson, Tailor," and which was the place where Andrew Johnson, the man who succeeded Lincoln as president of the United States, began his business career, probably will be bought and preserved by the state of Tennessee.

A bill now is pending in the Tennessee legislature providing for the purchase of the building and its maintenance as a state relic. Its picture has adorned Tennessee histories for years but the commonwealth has been slow to take steps to preserve the building. The little tailor shop stands at the corner of East Depot and College streets in the sleepy little town where Johnson, who was born in Raleigh, N. C., emigrated at the age of eighteen. Having served his apprenticeship to a tailor, Johnson opened his first shop in Greenville. After a year he was married to Miss Eliza McCordell to whose lot it fell to teach her young husband to write and undertake other educational preliminaries as Johnson knew only his letters when he became head of his own house, having never attended school a day in his life.

Johnson's political career began as alderman of Greenville. He then served as mayor, was elected to the lower house of the legislature, then state senator, afterward to congress, became governor of Tennessee serving two terms, United States senator, military governor of Tennessee, was elected as vice president of the United States and became president upon the death of Lincoln. His final political office was that as United States senator from Tennessee.

Johnson, while governor of Tennessee, once resumed his vocational implements. He had formed a strong friendship in the Tennessee legislature, for W. W. Pepper, of Springfield, a staunch Whig and once a blacksmith. Despite their irreconcilable political creeds the personal relations of Johnson and Pepper were extremely cordial. Pepper became justice of the seventh judicial district in 1854 and after a visit to Johnson, then governor, set about making a present to his friend, fashioning a shoyel which he sent with a note explaining it was intended as a memento of a friendship that was proof against all political differences.

Johnson, to show his appreciation of the token, took up his scissors and needle and made a handsome beaver cloth which he pressed and sent to Pepper. It was a splendid piece of workmanship, probably the last of that kind of work Johnson ever did, exists to this day, the property of W. W. Pepper, Judge Pepper's only surviving son. The coat was made about 11 years before Johnson entered the White House and the movement to preserve his old tailor shop in Greenville by legislative enactment has received that story of the tailor president.

M. P.'S SO POOR THEY MUST STRAP-HANG

LONDON, March 23.—(U. P.)—A member of Parliament's life is not a happy one.

In fact, various M. P.'s gathered themselves together into a Select Committee in order to prove just how unhappy a life they led. The general grievance of these men who represent constituencies is the same as that of the men who represent nothing—lack of cash. The salary of a member of Parliament is 400 pounds a year—or about $1,600, which, it is claimed, does not lift them "above the ordinary worries of the kitchen."

M. P.'s pointed out that their incomes only permitted them to travel third-class on the railways and they compared themselves to "Tarzan of the Apes" on account of the invariable and unnecessary exercise they got "strap-hanging" in the crowded trains each day.

The upshot of the whole investigation was that the following recommendations are to be made:
No change in M. P.'s salaries, but that the 400 pounds should be regarded as expenses and therefore not subject to income tax, which is very heavy in England.

That M. P.'s should have free first-class travel between London and their constituencies.
Free postage on parliamentary letters.
This probably constitutes the most human document that has ever appeared in the guise of a White Paper.
