APANESE QUESTION IN HONOLULU WI BE BROUGHT TO HEAD One is Law Passed in 1920 Regulating Foreign Language in Schools of Island.

HONGLULL', T. H., March 31- (A. $-(\Lambda, P_1)$ Two pieces of fegiciation, one already on the statute books of the territory and the other on its way the territory and the other on its day through the legislature, promise to bring the Japanese question to a head in flawait. The first is the law pass-ed late in 1920 regulating foreign language schools and the second is the bill to regulate the foreign language press

On the language school law the department of public instruction, backed by the attorney general, has refused to alter its position, despite strong rep-resentation made by Chinositke Yada, consul-general of Japan, and the lead-mg Japanese professional and busi-ness men of Honolulu.

The law provides that teachers in theigh language schools, which are limited to one hour's instruction daily for six days of the week, shall pass examinations for permanent certificates at the epd of the first and second years of the act's operation, in the meantime teaching an temperary cerifficates. The Japanese held out for certificates which will permit their teachers to give instruction for five years after passing their examinations with the aid of interpreters, if neces-ALLY.

interpreters will be permitted for the examination for the one-year temporary license, says the department of public instruction, but for the permanent certificate examination the teachers must stand on their own linguistic legs, and those legs 'must American.

On the heels of this ultimatum ame the bill requiring the foreign anguage press to file translations of all articles, not bona fide advertise-ments, with the territorial authorities. This measure originated with the American legion.

"Such a law would put this paper out of business, and, I believe, every other Japanese maper in the islands," said Yasutare Segu, editor of the Up-pu Jiji of Honolulu, the ' most influential Japanese daily in Hawali. "It is very radics," be added, "and we could not stand the extra expense."

Opinion in Japanese consulate-gen eral circles on the language press bill went a step farther. There it was regarded as little short of intimidatory The Japanese do not dispute the territory's right to scan their papers, but they say the expense should not be thrust on them. If the Japanese and other foreign language press is to be regulated and consored, they declare, the expense of the censorship should be borne by the territory.

"The public of Japan will be much interested to read a piece of legisla-tion like this," said Mr. Soga of the
