MOTHER WOULD NOT LEAVE HER TWO DAUGHTERS

Passenger on Ill Fated Governor Refuses to Leave Vessel on Learning Children Lost.

INQUIRY IS BEING MADE REGARDING DISASTER

Blame for Vessel's Sinking May be Determined Today by Federal Officials in Session.

SEATTLE, April 2.—(U. P.)—Mrs. W. N. Washburn, Jr. of Neah Bay, Wash., lost her life aboard the ill-fated steamship Governor because she would not leave her two daughters, Olene and Sadie, the survivors said. Mrs. Washburn refused to leave the ship just before she sank, when it became apparent that her daughters were imprisoned in the wrecked stateroom and could not be extricated and saved. They went down amid the terrible explosion of the Governor's boilers. Seven others who are missing, are supposed to have drowned during the transfer of passengers.

Queen Replaces Governor
SEATTLE, April 2.—(U. P.)—With the number of lost lives at sea, additional inquiry was conducted into the collision early yesterday that resulted in the sinking of the steamship Governor by the freighter West Hartland. The blame for the disaster may be determined today by federal officials, who are conducting a separate inquiry. The inquiry which the captains Ames and Lord, the United States steamboat inspectors, started shortly after the West Hartland limped into port yesterday was featured today by the testimony of the officers and crew of both vessels.

How the new freighter rammed the passenger liner off Point Wilson and sent the vessel beneath forty fathoms of water, is being told behind closed doors to the two inspectors sitting at the Maritime grand jury. Captain Harry Martin, who was piloting the Governor in when she was struck, was almost unanimously accredited by the survivors as saying he mistook the main lights of the West Hartland for shore lights. Some said Martin probably discovered his mistake and failed to estimate the freighter's speed correctly. The Governor, valued at $1,500,000 was replaced on the San Francisco-Puget Sound run by the Admiral Hoce, Queen.

The two commissioners accompanied by Engineer Kelly are making a personal inspection of the project today with a view to getting first hand information. One of the mooted points is whether work shall start from the Pendleton end of the highway or from Cold Springs landing. It is being vigorously contended by many local people and farmers that the greatest community benefit will result from starting work from the Pendleton end of the highway. FARMERS WOULD SUFFER IF SALES TAX PASSES

That the proposed federal sales tax is a substitute for the income and excess profits tax is a dubious proposition especially when viewed from the standpoint of the farmer, is the belief of Cecil Cooper, income tax expert. "I have just computed what the proposed one per cent sales tax would mean to two clients of which I have knowledge," says Mr. Cooper. "In one case a man during the last four years paid a total of $4000 in income and excess profits tax. Under the sales tax plan this man would have had to pay a total of $4300 and the worst of it is that he would have had to pay that tax no matter whether he made any money or not.
