ENGLAND IS LOOKING FOR AMERICAN TOURISTS

LONDON, April 14.—(A. P.)—First signs of spring in England have spurred the transportation companies and the tourist agencies into a fever of expectancy and all eyes are turned toward America which Europe regards as the land of the millionaire.
Visitors from the United States are promised much in the way of accommodations, with conditions approximating those in pre-war days prevailing. Hotels and pensions again have plenty of rooms on comparatively short notice, and passport ceremonies are shortened.
Incoming passengers are still closely supervised by British port authorities, but the examination is much less exhaustive than last season. Then it was necessary for an American citizen to go to the trouble of getting a passport, if he is even embarking for his native land. Such a procedure is no longer necessary.

Police restrictions in the British Isles also are relaxed, registration being required only if a visitor intends to remain more than 60 days, and railway facilities are greatly improved in schedules and travel accommodations.
At this date, no steps have been taken toward organized welcome for American tourists because it is believed they can be taken care of adequately by the regular institutions for this purpose. No detail will be overlooked, however, it is pointed out, to insure comfort for all who touch British shores this season.
Travelers to Ireland, it is said, will be taken care of as far as it is physically possible under the circumstances. Tourist agencies are quite frank in admitting that only the well-to-do are financially able to bear the expense of travel at present when a first class cabin ticket costs approximately $500 one way.
They say the tourist traffic last year was practically without the large numbers of school teachers and professional people who came to Europe formerly to spend the summer weeks in travel and study. These folks they say, can not pay the prices it is necessary to charge to make the tourist business pay, and there are no signs now that travel will be cheaper in the near future.
It is also believed possible that many persons will be deterred from visiting Europe this summer because of the unsettled condition of business and of international economic affairs. However, indications are, it is said, that more tourists will want to see Europe in 1921 than can be handled. In this connection, the advantage Americans have in view of the favorable exchange is pointed out.
Many ships have been added to the trans-Atlantic service since last summer and it is estimated that the ship companies will be able this summer to carry one-third more passengers than in 1920.
Some Return.
"See my son is in college."
"Well, are you going to get any return for the money you are spending?"
"I think so. His valet is taking the course, and looks like he'll graduate high enough to do us all credit."

- AN EDITORIAL ON BUYING

While business readjustment and declining prices have their ultimate advantages to the public in lower prices and more stable conditions, there are still possible dangers worth heeding.

Right now "price" is the big consideration. Jobbers, merchants and the public are buying their requirements primarily on the price basis.

A declining market always brings price to the front and makes it the foremost consideration in business transactions.

The fact that prices are the overwhelmingly consideration naturally influences manufacturers as well. The price consideration reflects back to them to such an extent that they are compelled, in order to do business, to cut their costs to the bone, reduce their profits to a minimum and to effect economies wherever possible.

This is a good thing if it is not overdone.

But the trouble is that it is and will continue for a while to be greatly overdone. Manufacturers who make products not intended to be advertised over their own name or sold over the guarantee of a most reputable merchant can skip in the making of their wares and cut costs below what they should be and get away with it. The result, even though it might not be immediately noticeable in the product, is a decided lowering of quality.

Quality is sacrificed in order to meet the demand for extremely low prices.

Such merchandise, that does not bear a manufacturer's own trade name or a reliable merchant's guarantee, is very likely in these times to be of far lower quality than in the case when times are normal.

That sort of manufacturing can get by with it because he does not assume responsibility to the public for his product.

He makes goods that do not bear his name and therefore the public cannot blame him, if, after they have purchased, they find the goods of inferior quality.

On the other hand, a manufacturer or a merchant who brands his goods with his own trade name and who has been and is advertising them to the public, assumes the full responsibility for the quality of his goods to such an extent that he dare not so skimp in manufacturing as to seriously affect quality.

To do so would be suicide. If any manufacturer of a well-known, well-advertised product were to materially lower the quality, when the public detected it, the thing would act like a boomerang. Instead of having public good will be would have public ill will and it would take years to overcome what might be done in six months.

Therefore, it is to your interest in these times more than any other time, to buy merchandise of known quality and value. In these times you can rely upon such merchandise far more than you can any other. You will know that you are getting quality first, if the cost has been lowered, it is not because quality has been sacrificed.

No matter whether it is a suit of clothes, a fountain pen, a phonograph or a breakfast food, the eternal vigilance that marks the manufacture of advertised brands must continue and is continuing.

Purchasing advertised brands is today a greater safeguard and assurance of quality than ever before. You can buy such goods knowing them to be right, whereas with other goods you cannot be sure that they have not been skimped and cut and weakened in the process of manufacturing in order to meet the lower price demand.

And because this is true it will pay you—the reader—to follow advertising closely and constantly. It is a duty you owe yourself—a duty you owe your home.

DAVIS OBTAINS FACTS DURING INVESTIGATION OF CONSUMER'S PRICES

Drops in Price to Consumers Are Slower Than Drops in Prices of Basic Materials.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(Ralph F. Couch, U. P. Staff Correspondent)—Middlemen are now buying a toll of 21 percent on the value of all food-stuffs and most of the necessities used throughout the United States, according to price data which is in the possession of Secretary of Labor, Davis. The facts collected by Davis' department emphasized an exposure made by Harding in a message that drops in prices to consumers are slower than drops in prices of basic materials. Davis is ready to lay his information before congress if an investigation is undertaken, as has been requested by the president.

FOUNTAIN PEN SAVES LIFE.

LABSON, April 14.—(A. P.)—Attempts to assassinate the judges and members of the Tribunal of Public Defense continue. Several of the members of the court already have been killed or wounded. The latest attempt was made on the life of Dr. Ferreira de Souza, one of the judges who was shot three times as he entered the state of his own garden.

His life was saved by the fact that one of the bullets aimed at his heart pierced a pocketbook and was stopped by his fountain pen, the bullet falling harmlessly into his pocket where it was found.

The police attribute these attacks to members of the Young Syndicalist Association.
Dr. Ramon Preto, formerly of the cabinet and author of the law creating the Tribunal of Public Defense has received a letter threatening him with death and signed by "The Red Committee."
