DYSPEPSIA IS GREATEST ENEMY OF MODERN MAN

Distressing Malady Is Most Prevalent of All Present-Day Diseases — Thousands Are Relieved by Tanlac.

Of all the conditions that afflict humanity, chronic dyspepsia, or what is more commonly known as indigestion, is probably the most prevalent.

The most universal malady has baffled the medical profession for years, and the most skilled specialists have been unable to cope with it successfully.

Hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and physical, of the sufferers from chronic dyspepsia and their failure heretofore to get relief. A morbid, unreal, whimsical and melancholy condition of the mind, aside from the nervousness and physical suffering, is the usual condition of the average dyspeptic.

Dyspepsia, or indigestion, as the case may be, is usually caused by the eating of too much unsuitable food, and the mucous membrane of the stomach becomes irritated, and there is set up an acute or sub-acute gastric catarrhal condition which prevents the proper digestion of the food. This food is apt to ferment and decompose, and as a result the familiar distressing symptoms of dyspepsia may arise. In mild cases there is nothing more than an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach, with a certain amount of depression, headache, loss of appetite, perhaps belching of gas and occasional vomiting. There may be also accompanying intestinal symptoms, such as constipation, pains in the back, colic, etc.

There may be only the familiar heartburn due to the inflammation of the stomach from excessive cases of fermentation or putrefaction. In the most severe cases—those that last over a day or two—the symptoms enumerated may be much more intense. The distress may be marked and the general constitutional symptoms more evident. When this state is reached the loss of appetite, the mental depression, and the general uncomfortable feeling in the stomach are much more pronounced. This is particularly true in acute gastritis.

It frequently occurs from continued errors in diet that this condition becomes chronic, and the symptoms persist for an indefinite period. The appetite is very apt to be varied, but at times very good. Heartburn is frequent, if not constant. The stomach is painful on pressure, the tongue is coated, there is a bad taste in the mouth, and there are changes in the amount of salivary secretion. Constipation is also usually present, although diarrhoea may alternate.

Most cases of dyspepsia can be cured if the diet is properly looked after and with the proper treatment. Proper eating, the proper amount of food and hygienic living are the most important features of the treatment. Most people eat too fast and eat too much.

One noted authority has said that the stomach is the fountain head of health or disease, as the case may be. Tanlac was designed primarily for the regulation of the stomach, liver and bowels, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that they have also been relieved of rheumatism and other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

There is probably not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest the food, permitting the assimilation of the nourishing elements.

Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by the Tanlac treatment after other remedies had failed, but many of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.
