CREATION OF CITY PLANNING SYSTEM PROVIDED BY LAW

Ten Members to Serve on Body to Serve Cities to Settle Important Civic Problems.

The city planning idea of handling civic improvements in the city of Pendleton in the future, which is receiving much thought from the council, following a suggestion to this effect made by Mayor George A. Hartman of the meeting of that body last week, has a foundation in the laws of the state. It has been found as a result of an examination of the records of the session of the legislature in 1919.

Mayor Hartman's suggestion was to the effect that intelligent plans should be made and followed in the future building of the city, both as to where buildings of certain character shall be permitted and relative to laying out streets, creation of parks, recreation centers or similar projects of such a nature and other problems that are likely to be pressing as Pendleton continues to grow.

In the informal statement he made at last Wednesday night's meeting, he called attention to the vast sum of money Portland is preparing to spend to widen streets and remedy other mistakes that were made during the rapid growth of the city. He made the suggestion that in view of the projects already assured or being striven for that will assure a bigger Pendleton it would be the part of economy for the city to take stock of its possibilities right now in the way of building a city beautiful so that advantage might be taken of such a plan as rapidly as necessary to secure the greatest results.

Law Provides Way

Provisions for carrying out such ideas are made in Senate Bill 212 which was made a law in 1919. This act makes it possible for the legislative body of a city or town in the state to pass an ordinance creating a city planning commission. The commission shall consist of ten members, according to the law, three of which, the mayor, the city attorney and the city engineer are ex-officio members, and the remaining seven are to be appointed by the mayor. All members serve without compensation.

It is provided that the commission shall have the authority to employ consulting advisors on municipal problems when necessary and to pay for such services as authorized by the city council.

A report of the activities of the commission is required October 1 of each year, and is provided that a meeting shall be held once each month.

The Commission's Duties
One whole section of the act is taken up with the duties that revolve on the commission. The section is as follows:

It shall be the duty of the city planning commission, and they shall have power, except as otherwise provided by law, to recommend and make suggestions to the city council and to all other public authorities concerning the laying out, widening, extending, parking and locating of streets, sidewalks and boulevards, the relief of traffic congestion, the betterment of housing and sanitation conditions and the establishment of zones of districts limiting the use, height, area and bulk of buildings and structures; to recommend to the city council and all other public authorities plans for the regulation of the future growth, development and beautification of the municipality in respect to its public and private buildings and works, streets, parks, grounds and vacant lots, and plans consistent with the future growth and development of the city in order to secure the health, safety, convenience, proper service of all public utilities, harbor, shipping and transportation facilities; to do and perform any and all other acts and things necessary or proper to carry out the provisions of this act; and in general to study and to propose such measures as may be advisable for the promotion of the public interest, health, morals, safety, comfort, convenience and welfare of said city, and of the area for six miles adjacent thereto.

The first will be held over the week end at the home of Lloyd George's millionaire secretary, Sir Phillip Sassoon, at Hythe.
