That there is danger from disease germs under the present system is readily seen, Mr. Cunningham indicated, and public sentiment is rapidly crystallizing against such action.

"You can't afford the elaborate system that the big cities use," he said in his discussion. "Some of the methods now being followed call for continuing attendance on the part of skilled employees of the city. That is expensive."

"For your use I would suggest a combination septic tank and filter bed. The tank should be a two-story one with a special dryer to take care of either crushed rock or gravel to purify liquid sewage. Such a plant will result in between 85 and 90 percent purification of the city's sewage."

Sewage Volume High.
Two good sites for the proposed plant have been visited by the engineer. One is not far from the state hospital, and the other is near the city dump grounds.

The probable cost of plant and site might be expected to run to at least $50,000. Mr. Cunningham estimated roughly. He also said that additional sums should be allowed for contingencies.

In speaking of the volume of sewage that is discharged by the city sewage system every day, the speaker declared that on the face of measurements made yesterday, the per capita flow every twenty-four hours amounts to 800 gallons, or a total of something more than 2,000,000 gallons. Such a volume is excessively high, he said.

Council members in an open discussion, after the engineer had concluded his report, indicated that they were of the opinion that "the buck should not be passed" any more on this problem. The cost of a simple incinerator was investigated. Members of the council declared in favor of cleaning up the present dumping ground.

The bid of the Warren Construction company for the improving of Grange street at $250 was accepted. The bid a more than $20 lower than the estimates made by the city.

OIL FOUND IN SPOKANE

SPOKANE, April 21.—(A. P.)—Owners of the property in the vicinity of Southwest boulevard here where it was reported yesterday a seepage of heavy crude oil had been discovered in the basement of a residence, are being approached by agents seeking to acquire oil leases. It was stated today by Sam Thomas, city fireman. Thomas said he was approached early today by a man who wanted an oil lease on the lot on which his home stands.

Close investigation of the reported oil seepage is planned by city officials.

GERMANS SEIZE TRADE; AMERICAN NAMES USED

SAO PAULO, Brazil, April 21.—(By Miles W. Vaughan United Press Staff Correspondent.)—The effort of the German to stage a post-war commercial comeback is probably more apparent in this city than in any other in Brazil.

As the leading center of the commerce of a fast-growing republic, Sao Paulo evidently has been picked by the Teuton commercial missionaries as the starting point of their "seize-Brazilian-business" campaign and evidences of a certain success are apparent.

Shop windows are filled with German-made goods, including many articles which are flagrant imitations of widely-known American specialties. For instance, one smart shop here today is displaying a window filled with vacuum bottles. Each bottle bears—in large letters—the name of a highly advertised American company which makes the same line of goods in small letters underneath, however, is the telltale mark "Made in Germany."

A salesman for a big North American manufacturing company tells a story that gives a typical insight into German methods. This man sells heavy machinery and makes a special of machines for railway repair shops. Recently he called upon an important division shop here in an effort to sell a certain machine. To his surprise the foreman exhibited a set of new machines bearing the name of his own company. But the mark was there—"Made in Germany."

"The only way I can explain it," says the American, "is that the German copied this design before the war and had it ready for the market as his ships were able to sail the seas again."

Cutlery, plumbing materials, electrical fixtures and a score of other articles tell the same tale. They look like American made goods until one hunts for the mark—which is always there—"Made in Germany."

And Sao Paulo has a rather large and very active German population, too. Immigrants have come in since the war and they are liked, because they work and attend pretty much to their own affairs.

A group of husky young Teutons, with cowhide boots, infantry trousers, with cowhorns on their shoulders instead of rifles. How they got out of Germany with the uniforms is a question they can best answer.

The German is proceeding quietly but surely in nearly every Brazilian market. The merchant, if he feels called upon to make an explanation, shrugs his shoulders and says: "It's good merchandise and his prices are cheaper than those of the Americans or the British."
