LAUK MAKES TALK TO UNITED STATES RAILROAD LABOR BOARD

Gives Details How Organized Labor Thinks Roads Can Save in Annual Expenditures

CHICAGO, April 27.—(Robert S. Thornburgh, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)—Details of how organized labor believes railroads of the United States can save over one billion dollars in expenditures annually were described by W. Jett Lauck, American Federation of Labor economist, today in a statement to the United States railroad labor board.

Lauck appeared as a witness for railroad unions in their fight to prevent reduction of wages asked by the railroads.

"Highest efficiency in railroad administration will be obtained through a national unified control or a regional control which will utilize all existing facilities regardless of competing claims," Lauck said.

He quoted former Director-General William G. McAdoo to show that "there is no question but that great economies are possible under unified management in the direction of a comprehensive national plan for transporting products with minimum effort in the shortest time from point to point."

Lauck suggested pooling of repair shops, elimination of circuitous rail routes, unification of terminals, consolidation of ticket offices, universal mileage tickets, standardization of equipment, maintenance of uniform freight classifications, maintenance of common time tables between important points, high demurrage rates and operation of water routes for relief of crowded rail lines.

Pooling of locomotives and cars were recommended to meet traffic congestion. He said this would be impossible under private control.

Lauck charged failure to adopt economic devices, to standardize locomotives, over-development of motive power in respect to other facilities, inefficient freight handling at terminals, labor turnover waste, preventable loss and damage, poor accounting and other alleged extravagances cost the railroads $963,500,000 annually. "Engine terminals and shops are from ten to thirty years behind the times, rendering them about fifty percent efficient," the witness charged. "The 'permanent way' of railroads—
