WILHELM WAITED AND NOT IN VAIN

BERLIN, May 2.—(U. P.)—The weather vane and cement pole to which it was attached has disappeared from before Castle Bellevue, here.

It now adorns the former Kaiser's castle in Holland, and thereby hangs a tale showing another of the Kaiser's follies. When he first occupied Castle Bellevue in the Tiergarten section here, he missed the weathercock to which he was accustomed in his 47 other castles. He was angry, for he had the theory that he must know which way the wind blew before taking his daily stroll, lest by going in the wrong direction he take cold in one ear, which was sensitive.

The court attendants had an electrical device installed over his desk, registering the wind direction. This didn't jibe with his majesty's ideas, so he had the weather vane and mast erected in the yard where he could see it every morning. He was quite happy.

Then he went to Holland. He settled in the Castle Doorn. He saw at once upon entering his work chamber that something was lacking. The weather vane? Ah, yes, the weather vane!

There was nothing nearby whereto to attach the vane, so he wrote the Prussian finance ministry here to please send the Bellevue weather vane.

The vane arrived in Doorn, but Wilhelm was still unhappy, for the mast was missing. Again, he wrote. The Prussian ministry was again accommodating and forwarded the mast. His majesty was satisfied.

MAN AND WIFE FIGHT DUEL.

ARLINGTON, Tex., May 3.—Mrs. Dovie Ingle, 23 years of age, shot to death Mackinley Inkle, 25 years of age, her husband and was mortally wounded in what the police say was a duel between the two on the Ingle farm south of here.

An Idle Pair.

"What is your father, my little man?"

"He's a bricklayer."

"And what does your mother do?"

"Oh, she don't do much, either."
