TWO STATES AT WORK ON PROJECT REPORT

At a conference in Portland several days ago between State Engineer Percy Cupper, State Hydraulic Engineer Marvin Chase of Washington, J. H. Lewis, former Oregon state engineer, W. L. Boise and C. Brownell of the Umatilla Rapids Power Site association plans were perfected for obtaining a detailed report on the project. In obtaining this data John H. Lewis will be in active charge of the work but the report will be compiled jointly by the engineering departments of the two states. It is estimated the work will cost $1400 and of this sum the power site association pays $600, while $800 will be obtained from the state engineer's office and Mr. Chase has promised to secure a like sum from Washington if possible. While in Portland the engineers were entertained by the officers of the Portland chamber of commerce and Mr. Boise who has written to Judge G. W. Phelps regarding the meeting. However that considerable progress was made towards further enlisting the support of the state of Washington in connection with the project.

CHILD TRAINING AT HOME

This is No. 20 of the fourth series of articles issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 3 West 40th Street, New York City. They are appearing weekly in these columns.

Living With the Children

BY MARY E. DELLY.

"Oh, listen, little Dear-my-Soul, To the fairy voices calling, For the moon is high in the misty sky And the honey-dew is falling." The fairy voices that called to us in our childhood are still calling to the children of today, but in the midst of the turmoil and the unsettled conditions which surround them, these finer voices are more difficult to hear.

It is for the parents and teachers to realize that this atmosphere of unrest has a decided effect upon the life of the children and that it is stunting their development.

Let us seek inspiration so that we may be the golden, the leaders of our little people. We, who through experience of life know the facts, must also feel the thrill, for it is through our vision that the little child awaits the rare chance of being led to that priceless treasure, the Fairy Gold of the Spirit.

Where do we go for our inspirations? Sometimes to the poets, "who sing of brooks and blossoms, birds and bowers, of dew and rain and lovely flowers."

The repetition of familiar nursery rhymes and songs creates an intimacy between mothers and young children which is very close and dear. Such rhymes as "This little pig went to market," "This a-cold horse," and "Rock-a-bye, baby," have made thousands of little children happy, since laughter, song and play combine in the strong bond of love.

Then why is this bond not continued as the child grows older? He is ready and eager for intimacy with his mother and is delighted to have her amplify his experiences. Unfortunately her knowledge of poetry is too often limited to Mother Goose and she does not realize that children need poetry and rhythm long after they have passed the Mother Goose stage.

There are many delightful rhymes and poems about animals, flowers, birds and the seasons which we may bring to the children and it is into the home that we should bring them for that is where poetic feeling should have its beginning. The school room alone cannot give the inspiration from which these expressions, these harmonies of words, thoughts and rhymes have sprung. When the ear becomes accustomed to the best language, a taste is formed for good literature, the best protection against much of the poor trash which periodically floods the market.

To establish a bureau for good literature in every home would do away with the necessity of "Better Speech Week." It would be a life asset and the rightful inheritance of every American-born child.

The following books give a good variety of poems for children of all ages: Pinocchio Palace, by K. D. Wiggin and N. A. Smith, published by Doubleday Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.; The Pony King, by K. D. Wiggin and N. A. Smith, published by Doubleday Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.; The Home Book of Verse for Young Folks, by H. E. Stevenson, published by Henry Holt & Co., New York City; Song Song, by Christina Rossetti, published by The MacMillan Co., New York City; The Golden Staircase, by L. Chisholm, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York City.

CARL GUIOTT WINS GOLD MEDAL IN ONE MILE BICYCLE RACE

Fourteen cyclists entered in the three events and the races were interesting. Today's card was the second annual race that has been staged in Pendleton. Medals were furnished by the national organization of manufacturers.
