FROM THE PEOPLE

Astoria, Ore., May 7th, 1921.
Editor, Pendleton East Oregonian.

The Astoria Evening Budget has recently published an editorial appearing in your paper in which you have expressed a theory from the standpoint of wheatmen the best thing that could come about would be the establishment of regular lines of large steamers operating between our West Coast ports and Europe, naming Astoria, Oregon, as one of the ports of export.

Your theory is absolutely correct and the arguments you use to back this theory are also correct. As you state, regular lines of steamers give anyone the opportunity to be an exporter, either in large or small quantities.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company in conjunction with the Holland-American Line have inaugurated a steamship service from north Pacific coast ports to ports in United Kingdom and Europe. At the present time vessels of the Holland-America line are making regular sailings, about a month apart.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company is the world's largest steamship organization (outside of the U. S. shipping board) and with their associated companies, all parts of the world are covered by their lines.

The joint service of The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and Holland-America Line will be glad to avail themselves for the benefit of anyone who wishes to ship cargo over their lines.

Yours very truly,
E. M. CHERRY,
Agent at Astoria, Oregon, the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company Holland-America Line.

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today and for a laxative, take Hood's Pills.

THE ROBIN

Oh, yesterday a robin came a-hopping
Found my place
And I was at the window with a sad
And gloomy face,
And I was feeling peevish and a thinking thoughts that come
When a fellow's discontented and the world is looking grim;
So I watched old Mr. Robin as he sang a worm or two
And skipped around the garden in the way that robins do.

His eye was bright and shiny and his head was in the air,
And if his face was wide enough a smile had lingered there
The breeze was blowing chilly and the ground seemed mighty bleak,
But the robin wasn't growing that the hard spots hurt his beak.
And the robin wasn't kicking that his little feet were cold,
He was happy to be living as his hits of music told.

SELLING DIRECT TO EUROPE

In a letter published on this page today, E. M. Cherry, agent at Astoria for the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. and the Holland-American line, supports the theory advanced by the East Oregonian that one need of the wheat grower is an arrangement under which anyone may become an exporter. Mr. Cherry sets forth that the Royal Mail company is now completing large ocean carriers that will soon be on the run between our west coast and Europe. He says these vessels will be larger than any now engaged in this trade and that they will call at Astoria for cargoes.

When a service of this sort is provided why will it not be possible for any farmer or group of farmers to sell wheat direct in Europe if they desire? Why should they have to depend on one or two exporting houses for the handling of their grain? There has been suspicion in the past that exporters have not always paid the farmer all their wheat is worth, based on the European price. It is easy to see how the exporter or a number of exporters working under a gentleman's agreement might take advantage of the grower. In fact it would be a singular state of affairs if the exporters did not make all the money they could. That is what they are in business for.

But with the coming of regular lines of large steamers ready to handle wheat along with other classes of freight there should be a change in the situation. Exporting will cease to be a "big man's game." Any grain dealer or group of farmers, working under a cooperative selling plan, will be able to send their wheat direct to the European market. It may be assumed the European purchasers will welcome the innovation. They may have complaints also against the exporter and therefore welcome a chance to buy more directly.

IT WILL SOLVE A BIG PROBLEM

To get the subject of the German indemnity definitely and fully settled will mean to set the stage for a world wide revival of business. We will be back to where we would have been over a year ago had the peace treaty been ratified by the United States senate.

Discussing the Hughes advice to Germany, the New York World says:

The desire that Mr. Hughes expresses for a prompt settlement of this vexatious question is practically world-wide. The economic life of all the nations is marking time while Berlin, London and Paris haggle over the issue. Germany is no less concerned than the allies in what Mr. Hughes describes as a prompt settlement for the German industrial and commercial establishment will not begin to function properly until this matter is settled and the German people know exactly what they will have to pay.

What is equally important, the German people need the moral rehabilitation that would follow the evidence of an honest desire to meet their obligations. The evil reputation that the imperial diplomacy justly acquired still attaches to the republic, and nothing has yet been done to redress the balance. Nothing that Germany says or does is accepted in good faith, and nothing will be accepted in good faith until Berlin gives unmistakable proof of a desire to meet the issue that is involved in the reparations dispute.

The allies have already shown that their ultimatum is subject to revision, but they cannot be expected to renounce in a mood to compromise unless Germany stops playing fast and loose with the issue. The fact that the French have not already occupied the Ruhr valley is due solely to the restraining influence of Great Britain and the United States on the Briand cabinet. This restraint cannot be permanent unless Germany comes forward with the "clear, definite and adequate proposals" that Mr. Hughes advises.

Reports show a probability the Berlin government will now accept the allies' demands. They have no other recourse, having found that Uncle Sam will not help them. The Germans should have known all that long ago but they placed much faith in the anti treaty fight in America and grew especially hopeful after the November election. Hence the long uncertainty, the armed invasion of the Rhineland and the economic depression throughout the world, arising in large measure from doubt as to who would have to pay for the war. Let us hope all that is now to be ended.

Henry Albers will get a new trial but under conditions less favorable for his conviction. By the action of the attorney general's office the prosecution will be barred from using certain evidence formerly used, which was admitted by the federal judge in Portland, by the federal court of appeals and which class of evidence in the Marie Equi case was allowed by the supreme court. It seems quite plain that in barring this evidence in the Albers case Solicitor General Frierson has placed himself above the courts and it does not set well to have an official do this especially when the man on trial is accused of disloyalty.

Seattle people want the Northern Pacific to electrify as has the Milwaukee, the Puget sound view being that Portland's differential may be overcome by electrification. Anyone who talks railroad electrification in the northwest is on solid ground.

Do a little investigating and you will find that local prices in many lines have done some remarkable tumbling in the last year.
