Full Understanding

The fullest measure of life is understanding, through it all things can be received at their true value. When there is full understanding, conflict ceases, and upbuilding goes on unhampered—it is the essence of success.

A group of Pendleton manufacturers and merchants have banded together with the object of giving the people a fuller understanding of the service rendered by them everyday throughout the year—of their high-class merchandise manufactured and distributed—and of their willingness to assist in the maintenance of this fair community.

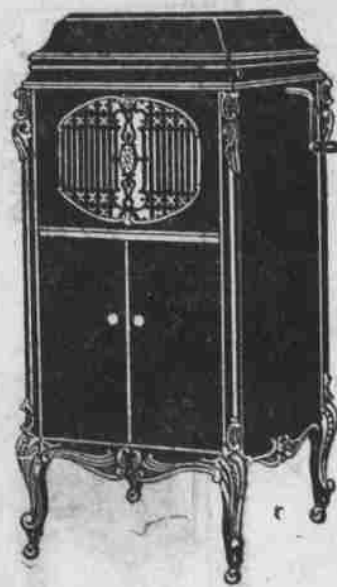

Their three days' exhibition to be held this week, and your presence will be the means of the up-building of understanding—of development and stabilization of business.
