HEIRESS, CURED BY GREAT SURGEON, TO WED WORLD WAR HERO

Lolita Armour, Only Child of Millionaire Packer Will Wed John Mitchell, Jr., in June.

CHICAGO, June 2.—(U. P.)—Lolita Armour, the only child of J. Ogden Armour, the millionaire packer, and John J. Mitchell, Jr., son of the chairman of the board of directors of three of Chicago's largest banks, will be married here June 18. The wedding will unite two of Chicago's oldest and wealthiest families.

Behind that social announcement lies an intensely interesting and gripping story of a "poor little rich girl," crippled at birth, who with the aid of the world's greatest scientists, developed into a normal, healthy, sport-loving woman.

The bride-to-be, when a child, showed signs of a serious hip trouble. She was unable to walk and apparently was doomed to go through life an invalid. The best specialists of the country were consulted.

An operation was performed in 1900, when the child was three years of age, without benefit. Her parents sought throughout the world for someone to cure her. In 1902, the girl's father went to Vienna to consult with Dr. Adolph Lorenz, the world's most noted orthopedic surgeon. Armour appealed to the scientist to make a trip to Chicago to cure the girl. Lorenz was loathe to leave his practice in Vienna. Armour offered to pay any amount if he would make the trip. It was finally agreed that the physician should receive $100,000 and all expenses for himself and staff to go to Chicago and try to cure the child.

The surgeon attended the child in the Armour home here. The surgeon discarded the knife and used the compelling strains of straps and weights as a substitute. The five year old girl was under an anaesthetic for two hours. Efforts of Lorenz and his staff were centered on forcing the hip bone into the socket. After two hours' work there was a sharp "click." The surgeon released his grip on the tiny body. The bone had been forced into the socket. The operation was a success.

A plaster cast was placed on the hip and remained there six months. A year and a half later the girl was still unable to walk. However, surgeons were confident that the operation would be successful, if given time. In 1904, Lolita was taken to Vienna for the final treatment at the hands of the famous specialist. Her father carried her on board the ship as she was still unable to walk. During a short stay in Vienna, she learned how to walk, and when the family returned to this country, she ran down the gangplank of the boat and played as any healthy, normal child.

She later became an accomplished sportswoman and was noted as an equestrian. Lolita has taken a great interest in Chicago's charitable institutions, but her greatest efforts have been toward aiding institutions caring for crippled children.

Following her cure, her father built a two million dollar home for her at Lake Forest, a Chicago suburb and called it "Lolita Farm."

During the war she converted her home at Santa Barbara, Cal., into a hospital for American crippled soldiers. When 20 years of age, she was elected a trustee of the Armour Tech Institute.

Mitchell was in the aviation service during the war. He was seriously injured when a plane which he was piloting collided with that of another flyer 100 feet above ground. The other aviator was killed.

Europe outside of Russia has ended in failure. About five months ago the big Zlichov Gaiel glassworks was converted into a workman's cooperative enterprise. Previously the plant had been one of the most prosperous in Bohemia. The Ministry of Social Assistance contributed 200,000 crowns and the Cooperative Labor Bank one million crowns towards the experiment. After five months' management of the plant the workmen have found themselves faced with a deficit of 600,000 crowns and have confessed themselves unable to continue the experiment.
