Timbs, Tacoma taxicab driver, May 8. Private Edward Filion, the fourth soldier implicated, was found guilty in a separate trial last week.

The jury in the case of the three soldiers, was out but 29 minutes, making the shortest murder trial within the memory of court house officials. Not one of the defendants was called to testify. The jury brought in a special verdict for life imprisonment instead of hanging and the state had previously agreed to forego the plea for the death penalty provided the defense would not go into details in cross examination and introduction of evidence, thereby prolonging the trial.
