MEDICAL DIRECTOR TAKES SLY POKES AT NEW PRACTICES

Eating of Dried Apples in Old Days Had Same Effect That Eating Yeast Now Has.

Poking a little sly fun at some of the practices of this day without attempting to detract from the value of the advances that are being made, J. E. Hall, medical director of the Oregon department of the Grand Army of the Republic, made his annual report yesterday afternoon at the business session of the encampment. Laugh and chuckles greeted the report which is always an enjoyable feature of the annual proceedings of the body. The report is as follows:

"The Medical director is again privileged to bring you greetings, congratulating you that your growing increasingly gray, and some of you increasingly bald, has not prevented you from taking an interest in passing events, or dimmed your enjoyment of the kindness of friends. The good sisters of our auxiliaries continue to show such interest in our welfare as to sometimes imperil the integrity of our digestive apparatus in their desire to feed us well, but so far favorable reaction has followed.

"We have noted also changed conditions brought about as the result of scientific research and find some compensation in the reflection that if we are growing physically weaker (which by the way, we are not all willing to admit) we die at the same time growing wiser. Some of us may have the experience of the man who got out his watch to tell his friend the time, and was told, "When I saw your watch some time ago it had gold cases, now you have a silver cased one." "Yes," he replied, "but you must understand that circumstances alter cases." This department is led to believe that there is a disposition to make the best of the circumstances. This is optimistic and its cultivation is strongly advised.

"Changes have taken place in the domain of medicine, and in some of these changes we have more than a passing interest while others do not vitally concern us. Strange as it seems to us, the dentist these days is looked upon as a sort of life preserver. That very individual whose offices we kept shy of, or if compelled to visit him for tooth extraction acted a good deal as Far did when he got into the chair and lacked courage to open his mouth enough to set forceps hold of the tooth. In his case the dentist being a resourceful man winked to an assistant who pricked Pat's leg with a needle and when he opened his mouth to "holer" inserted the forceps and finished the job. When completed he said, "Now that didn't hurt so very much did it?" Pat's surprise caused this reply, "Doctor, I didn't think the roots of a tooth went far enough down to hurt my leg like that."

"Well, the dentists or somebody for them, seem to have made a discovery that the tooth which they used to be so anxious to save and either fill for us, or file off level with the gum and use the root as a socket for a new tooth on a wooden peg, must not be treated that way now. An X-ray examination is now called for and certain shades or lack of shades about the root of a tooth demands its extracting upon the belief that infection is waited in and must be allowed to escape to relieve the victim of lumbago or some allied physical discomfort. Tonsils are looked on with suspicion also and removed with surprising frequency.

At our age we can congratulate ourselves on having passed through the period of infection from gum boils, decaying teeth, and pyorrhea without having had our lives shortened before the warning X-ray was here to tell us of our danger, and while yet in the vigor of youth, being compelled to wear a mouth full of celluloid plates in order to do any chewing. Some of us suffer from lumbago without any teeth except those a dentist has already supplied, but to all rules there are some exceptions.

We are told now that yeast cakes are exceedingly nourishing and by their power of expansion will cause a much more agreeable sensation of moderate fullness of the stomach than our old habit of eating dried apples and drinking water to make them swell. We got along fairly well with the dried apples but might try the yeast cakes if we want to keep up with the procession after other stomachs have taken the risks.

A comrade is reported to have asked a druggist this question, "Is an ounce of prevention really better than a pound of cure?" "I wouldn't like to say," responded the druggist. I sell both. "Whether comrade are taking the ounce of prevention, or wrestling with the pound of cure, this department suggests that the benefits of either will be greatly enhanced by cheerfulness and helpfulness; practicing the fraternity, charity and loyalty proclaimed in the tenets of our organization."

J. E. HALL, Medical Director.

Three Generations in Murder Case

Three generations of women are indicted for the murder of Dan F. Kaber, Cleveland publisher. The women are Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber (center), the publisher's widow, Mrs. Mary Brickel (right), her mother and Marian McArdle (left), her daughter by a former marriage. Mrs. Brickel, police say, confessed to having, with Miss McArdle, conspired the house to make it appear that Kaber had been killed by burglars. Mrs. Kaber denies she had any part in the killing.
