To the Poor

Most of the millions left by the late Roger C. Sullivan of Chicago will go to establish scholarships for poor young men and women. That's what Roger Sullivan, the politician's son, shown above, has announced he will do with his legacy.

MEN AND WOMEN ATTEND SCHOOL TO LEARN TO TEACH WORLD TO PLAY

Only 70 Students Could be Accepted and it Was Difficult Task to Select Scholars.

BRYAN MAWR, Pa., June 15.—(A. P.)—A group of women workers in industry, representing many states, gathered at Bryn Mawr College today for the opening of an educational experiment without precedent in America—a two months' summer college course for working women.
 Scholarships covering tuition, board, room, everything but incidental personal expenses such as laundry, had been provided for these young women by trades unions or through working girls' clubs. The college has assembled a corps of instructors from colleges and universities throughout the East and Middle West, to help train these young women along broad and constructive lines, so help train these young women along broad and constructive lines, so that they may exercise an increasing influence in the social and industrial world.
 Only 70 students could be accepted and it was a difficult task for the joint administrative committee, representing the college and women workers in industry, to select them from the many applications. They were chosen because of character and ability from among those who had shown a natural aptitude for leadership.
 Subjects offered include English—both written and spoken—public speaking, literature, history, economics, government, labor movements and

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS

A group of Bryn Mawr alumni will live in the same dormitory with the new students and share their athletic and social activities.
 New York is represented by the largest number of students, with Massachusetts and New Jersey coming next. Others were divided in small groups—sometimes only one to a state—representing Connecticut, Rhode Island, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, District of Columbia, Georgia and California.
 Trades represented include weavers, sewing machine operators, sheet and pillow case workers, shirt and collar makers, cap makers, milliners and trimmers, clothing makers of various sorts, hosiery and knit goods makers, hundry workers, cigar box makers, bindery workers, printers and proof readers, silk workers, cordage workers, overall makers, electric workers, paraffine workers, telephone operators and soap makers.

CUPID AT HALF PRICE.

OLIVIA, YOU SHOULDN'T ENCOURAGE THAT YOUNG MAN, HE'S SO MUCH YOUNGER THAN YOU!
 HE PROPOSED TO ME TONIGHT!
 DID YOU ACCEPT HIM?
 NO, BUT YOU KNOW WHAT A BARGAIN HOUND I AM! WELL, WHEN I SAID NO HE LOOKED SO CHEAP I COULD HARDLY KEEP FROM TAKING HIM!

This Is One Boy!

Yes, may not believe it, but this is the same boy—before and after. Sam Wagner was one of Chicago's school children that submitted to a "facelift" during a campaign to urge neatness among pupils.
