GENERAL JOHN PERSHING ASSUMES DUTIES OF CHIEF OF STAFF TODAY

Preparedness is Goal; Civilian

Worth to be Recognized; Aim for Decentralization.

BY HARRY L. ROGERS (International News Service Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1.—General John J. Pershing today assumed his new duties as head of all the military forces of the United States.

As Chief of Staff, succeeding Major-General Peyton C. March, whose approaching retirement has been announced, General Pershing is in command of the General Staff, the War Department peace-time organization, and as head of the general headquarters organization, authorized by Secretary of War Weeks, he will have charge of the work of recruiting the reserve strength of the Army and of building up the war machine which he will command if the United States again gets into war.

General Pershing is thus put in a position of more authority than has ever before been bestowed upon an army officer in time of peace. While nominally chief of staff, he will actually be the executive officer of the Secretary of War.

Major-General James G. Harbord, as assistant to General Pershing, will have charge of the routine work of the General Staff and in reality will fill the position which General March has occupied for more than three years.

Preparedness is Goal It is the intention of Secretary Weeks that General Pershing shall devote the greater part of his time and attention to the problem of preparing the United States in time of peace for war.

His first task will be that of organizing the General Headquarters, which, under present plans, will be built up on the general lines of those followed by Marshal Poch in the French army prior to the outbreak of hostilities in 1914. On this subject General Pershing has very definite ideas. He says in 1917, how the War Department General Staff was disrupted when it became necessary to take the cream of officer talent from that organization in order to form a staff for overseas duty. He is determined that such a situation shall not be brought about again if he can prevent it.

While the facilities at hand will permit of only a skeleton organization, General Pershing intends to build up that skeleton organization in such a way that it will be adequate to take the field in time of crisis and immediately start functioning as the directing head of the American war-time armies. There would, of course, need to be many additions of personnel to put the organization on a war footing, but under General Pershing's plan there would be a trained man for every really vital post who would not only know how to run his job but would also be ready to break in others as his assistants when the proper time came.

Recognizes Civilian Worth The present General Staff will have charge of all routine matters of administration in the War Department during peace time. That organization would not be interfered with by the war-time machine, but in time of war would function as the Service of Supply for the Armies in the Field.

General Pershing also has positive notions as to the part the civilian soldier should play in our scheme of national defense. As a West Point graduate and "regular army man," the General appreciates the value of the professional soldier as a nucleus upon which to build an army. He labors under no illusions, however, as to the comparative importance of the roles played by professional soldiers and civilian soldiers during the World

DEMAND FOR TANLAC BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Amazing Success Achieved by Celebrated Medicine Not Only Phenomenal, But Unprecedented—Over 20,000,000 Bottles Sold in Six Years—Foreign Countries Clamor for It.

Never before, perhaps, in the history of the drug trade has the demand for a proprietary medicine ever approached the wonderful record that is now being made by Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results throughout this country and Canada. As a matter of fact, the marvelous success achieved by this medicine is not only phenomenal, but unprecedented.

The first bottle of Tanlac to reach the public was sold just a little over six years ago. Its success was immediate and people everywhere were quick to recognize it as a medicine of extraordinary merit. Since that time there have been sold throughout this country and Canada something over Twenty Million (20,000,000) bottles establishing a record which has probably never been equaled in the history of the drug trade in America.

Fame is International. The instant and phenomenal success which Tanlac won when it was first introduced has been extended to practically every large city, small town, village and hamlet in North America. Its fame has become international in its scope and England, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico and many European countries are clamoring for it.

From coast to coast and from the Great Lakes, Tanlac is known and honored. Millions have taken it with the most gratifying and astonishing

War. He believes the United States has in her youthful male population the greatest military material in the world, and he saw much of it prove its worth on the battlefields of France.

The great task, the General believes, is to keep these young veterans interested in the army. He wants the National Guard recruited to a strength of 500,000 or more, and he wants to see the Officers' Reserve Corps continued with its war-time spirit and morale.

The General believes the present system of training National Guard units is all wrong. Under the present scheme Regular Army officers who do not "fit" in other jobs are sent out as instructors to National Guard organizations. They are given no particular instructions as to how their work shall be carried on, and each man is free to do about as he pleases.

Decentralization is Aim General Pershing is convinced that instructors should be picked men, chosen because they show particular aptitude for the job they are to undertake. He believes the officers so chosen should then be sent to a school for six or eight months and given a uniform course in military pedagogy in order that there may be uniformity in the instruction they are to impart to embryo soldiers to whom they may later be assigned.

Incidentally, General Pershing is expected to make a few changes in the General Staff. While the nature of these changes has not been divulged officially as yet, it is understood that

Being a full general, General Pershing has the right to prescribe his own uniform and since his return to America he has always worn the Sam Brown belt, regardless of the fact that other officers may not wear it in the United States. It is expected that just as soon as he conveniently can the General will recommend to Secretary Weeks that the Sam Brown belt be adopted as part of the American uniform. General Harbord, too, is understood to favor the belt.

Hence the joy among former overseas officers who, despite two or three years of practice, have never quite got over the feeling that without the Sam Brown they are "half dressed."
