STORE LOW PRICED EGGS FOR WINTER USE, ADVISE

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, July 11.—Pack and store eggs for the winter while the price is low, says E. E. Pike, assistant professor of poultry husbandry at the Oregon Agricultural college.

"Eggs are cheap now," says Mr. Pike. Next winter they will be high. By packing your eggs now, you save at least half the money you would pay next winter. Packed eggs are good for cooking, but not for frying.

"If you use 9 parts of boiled water to 1 part of water glass your eggs will keep. The boiled water should be cooled before using. Ten quarts will fill a 5 gallon jar.

"The eggs should be set in an earthenware or glass jar because the solution attacks metal. They should be stored in a cool place with a cover over them to keep dust and dirt out. The water glass should be an inch over the eggs to allow for evaporation. Sometimes the solution thickens but this doesn't mean that the eggs will spoil. Water should not be poured in to make the solution thin."
