INDIRECT FIRING TO BE DEVELOPED BY U. S. NAVY BY AIRPLANE AID

With Help of Aerial Observers it is Expected That Ships Will be Able to Use Methods.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—New strength is coming to the American Navy from the heavens. The navy is willing to meet its new fighting arm—the air force—with open arms.
Although the bombing tests which are now going on off the Virginia coast, in which air craft are given fair opportunity to demonstrate their effectiveness against naval vessels, have failed to convince the men of the navy that battle fleets can be conquered from the air alone, they have succeeded in convincing naval officers that air forces can be of great aid to the navy in warfare. There is a decided sentiment in the Atlantic Fleet in favor of increased appropriations for air forces together with increased appropriations for the development of fighting surface craft. The navy in the seas want huge, fast aeroplane carriers in order that air forces may be depended upon as weapons of offense as well as defense in any war that may spring up in the years to come.

With the use of aircraft the Navy expects to develop successfully a new venture in naval warfare—indirect fire in attacks upon land defenses during the World War, but it has never been successfully used in naval bat-les as yet. The men of the American Navy are convinced that, with the aid of aircraft, they can develop an accuracy in indirect fire which will be deadly to the enemy.

Indirect firing is nothing more than shooting at an unseen target. The target being found miles and miles away by the aeroplanes, its location and range being reported by aeroplanes, and the fire directed by mathematical precision from a battleship, within range, but out of sight of the enemy. Indirect firing can be accomplished

Ribbons! Ribbons!! Ribbons!!!

Artistic use of pekee-edged ribbon makes this frock of new satined crepe one that youth will gaze upon with longing. This model, by Braner Brothers, New York, has the appearance of a straight-lined dress but it is really shirred on at the waist with a narrow ribbon belt tying in the back. Ribbons are popular now and the new fall and winter models are very much beribboned.

LOG OF JOURNEY

Pendleton. The writer talked to one man who looked like a Grant county stockman but found he had lived in Pendleton all winter and had known all Umatilla county sheepmen from Hugh Field to Dan Smythe. He said that the late Charles Cunningham was not as bad as he looked.

Pendleton Discovered

We remained over night at Ritter and left the next morning with Caverhill postoffice as our objective. W. S. Caverhill who lives there is the county commissioner for Northern Grant county and we had him at the head of our calling list. Mr. Caverhill has the Pendletonitis in the form that is generally prevalent throughout that whole region. He attended school here and at the Weston normal in his youth. He has a ranch of 1500 acres or thereabouts and last year raised 3400 bushels of wheat. He has 85 acres he can irrigate and part of this land is now being watered. He has a wonderful field of timothy hay and milks 10 cows. Mr. Caverhill banks in Pendleton.

Grant Co. Money Ready

From Mr. Caverhill we learned that Grant county has bonded itself twice for roads and has gone to the six per cent limit. There is now $50,000 of bond money available for work between Reed, Creek and Long Creek, and $20,000 for work between Long Creek and the Umatilla county line. How this money will be used is contingent upon what Umatilla county does. If we cooperate the money will gladly be expended where most needed on the road connecting with Umatilla county. If we do not get busy the money will be expended on roads connecting with Heppner. This point was also explained to us later by County Judge Patterson at Canyon City. As told to us by both Commissioner Caverhill and Judge Patterson it will be the policy of the Grant county court to expend all market road money on the north and south road and to devote as much money to this road as to the John Day highway, which leads from east to west through the county.

J. L. Crisswell, who lives in that region of Grant county, has 2000 acres of land. He raises cattle and banks at Canyon City and in Pendleton. George Baird, who lives near Caverhill, has 1500 acres of land. Allen Porter, a son of John Porter, has a 10,000 acre ranch. Emil Mueller, son of Louis Mueller, of Pendleton, now has the Ben Colvin ranch of 10,000 acres near Ritter. J. L. Carter, who lives on Pine creek, between Vaverhill and Long Creek, has 2000 acres. S. B. Carter, who lives on Pass creek, near Long Creek has 1500 acres.

"Contented Cows" Seen

From the Caverhill ranch we drove to Long creek and with each mile Pat Lowman's enthusiasm for the cream route grew with every mile. We passed contented cows, contented calves, contented bulls, contented hayfields and the staff photographer took snapshots so as to verify the story.
But the people are not contented. They have Pendletonitis and their love is so far unrequited. At Long creek, a leading merchant is C. A. Walton. The first thing we saw in his store was some "Snow Maid" flour from the Collins mill. He frankly admits his customers demand either "Snow Maid" or "White Satin" from the Walters mill, and don't like the Heppner flour. It is 74 miles from Long Creek to Heppner and 34 to Pendleton. The "Leading Merchant" banks in Pendleton. He pays a cent and a half a pound for freight from Heppner to Long creek. He recently got a load of freight from Pendleton when a man brought four loads of wool to either Pilot Rock or Pendleton. But the driver swore he would never do it again until the John Day grade is fixed. Mr. Walton is outspoken in deprecating business with Pendleton and says one reason for this is that a market can be found here for poultry, eggs and other surplus products of Grant county. He emphasizes that freight must be hauled both ways to be economic.

(The story of the party's trip from Long Creek through the remainder of the county to Canyon City and Prarie and over the mountains to Baker, and home via La Grande will be published tomorrow.)

STRAIGHT TAX OF SO MUCH A POUND SOUGHT BY OREGON WOOL MEN

Preference Expressed for This Plan Over Ad Valorem Tax Now Being Considered.

An effort to get a straight tariff tax rate on wool on a cleaned basis is being made by the Oregon Woolgrowers' association instead of the ad valorem tax that has been recommended. Telegrams to Oregon legislators at Washington have been sent by Mac Moke, secretary of the association, and wool men are interested in seeing the change made.

A straight tax of so many cents a pound is what the western men want, according to Moke. If the present scheme of an ad valorem tax is followed, it will mean that the 35 per cent of the market price will cause a high tax when wool is high and a low tax when wool is low, and that is just what the wool growers want to get away from.

"It's easy enough to see what effect this will have on the grower," Moke said today. "What the grower wants is protection. If wool is low as it is now, he wants a high tariff; but if it goes higher, then there is less need of government aid and protection, and the tax should be lower."

There is also a fight on between the manufacturers and growers as to whether the tax shall be placed on wool or a grease or clean basis. "The manufacturers want the grease basis, because they can buy foreign wool, do everything in the way of cleaning it except extracting the grease and have the benefit of the gain that is to be made. By following this method, the manufacturer can keep for himself the greater part of the tariff, but down the price to the domestic grower and sell all of his product to the public at an advanced price. In other words, according to the contention of the grower, the grease basis of applying the tariff makes it strictly a manufacturer's benefit, and not a relief to growers.

Found for pound, the present schedule will give coarse wool an advantage over the fine, but on the whole, the program will not work out to the disadvantage of the fine wool, according to Moke.

CHANGING SCREENS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Announcement of a change in the official grain standards of the United States for shelled corn was made at the United States Department of Agriculture here today. Under an order signed by Secretary Wallace, effective October 3, 1921, the size of the perforations in the screens used for determining foreign material and cracked corn is fixed at twelve sixths-fourths of an inch instead of fourteen sixths-fourths of an inch as at present.
