"DYNAMO" DAWES. "CUSSIN" BRIGADIER FROM THE WEST. STARTS ECONOMY STAMPEDE

Unholy Disregard for Red Tape Enables Fiery Foe to Drive Home Healthy Ideas of Thrift

By W. H. ATKINS (International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Wild dreams of bureau chiefs for expansion and heavier spending of public funds have been sadly shattered. These same bureau chiefs are today falling over each other in a stampede for economy.

In every government bureau in the twenty or more executive and independent establishments budget officers are running down their estimates for another year. They are also wading into carefully laid plans for expenditures this fiscal year to effect large savings. Before August 1, when the budget bureau expects to complete timates, to be sent later to congress, covering government money needs for another fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, a saving of not less than $60,000,000 in government expenses will be shown. Officials who are more optimistic predict that before General Dawes finishes his job a cut in general government outlays of $1,000,000,000 a year will be possible.

Dawes Direct Actionist.

"Hell and Maria" Dawes, putting the government on a practical business basis, is doing things that never were done before, and in a new way. There are no frills about the Dawes methods. His direct action gets results. He has hurried over most "red tape" in the brief time since he took the helm that would have seemed impossibly possible for any other man.

Officials soon found that either they were to swing in behind General Dawes to achieve the aims of the president's program, or that they were to be classified as not altogether indispensable to the working out of a program that means so much for the prosperity of the people and the nation.

General Dawes didn't wait to ask bureau chiefs about the advisability of an inventory of government stocks of materials, much of it surplus war stocks, that must be converted into cash as one way to cut down the tax burden.

He shot out an order that the thing had to be done and put a limit on the time in which the job must be accomplished.

Murder of Waste. Dawes saw extravagance rampant in all government departments and government funds wasted on imaginary needs for supplies. He put a crimp on that sort of waste by compelling every responsible official immediately to return to the general supply committee all equipment not now being used efficiently. Instead of letting lots of materials and supplies go essentially into junk from disuse it's the Dawes way to turn it into cash. This will be done as soon as the government inventory is completed.

Congress allotted government departments sums in many cases far beyond their actual needs. Dawes realized that to permit bureau heads to go ahead and draw from these funds the government would be the usual loser.

So he directed that not a dollar must be spent from current appropriations until the O. K. has been given by the budget bureau. It puts every responsible official dealing with government fiscal matters on trial. General Dawes, as the trial judge, holds officials under suspicion of recklessness and of any spending program.

A Reminder

These Belgian presents rendered homeless and orphaned by the Germans are allowed to live rent-free in "dog-outs" built on Ostent beach by the Germans. Their presence is a grim reminder to holiday makers from all over Europe of the tragedy of ravaged Belgium.

UNCLE SAM TAKES LIEN ON PROPERTY OF BOOTLEGGERS, WHO LEARN THAT ALL IS NOT PROFIT THAT EVADES THE LAW

DUBOIS, Pa., July 21.—(U. S. S.)

If your Uncle Samuel doesn't get you coming he is certain to get you going. His tax laws are like the laws of nature—you can't escape them.

Bootleggers thought they were slipping one over on the old gentleman and "getting away with it," but they have discovered that though they sold liquor illegally the government is going to collect its pound of flesh in the way of revenue taxes.

For months there has been a postural lot of bootlegging in this part of the state, according to current reports. Some were caught red handed and went so far as to plead guilty to save the expenses of defending a suit in court.

In the meantime Internal Revenue Collector Llewellyn, of Pittsburgh, took notice. He sent a special examiner up here in Clearfield County. The examiner went over the criminal court books in Prothonotary County (Judge) Hahn's office. He made a list of all those convicted of liquor law violations. This list was sent to headquarters in Pittsburgh.

In the last few days tax liens against many of these violators have been received at the prothonotary's office and are being chalked up against the property of each violator convicted.

They are perfectly good liens, too—iron clad and guaranteed not breakable. Better still, they have right of way over all other claims against the properties. Uncle Sam will collect his bill first—100 cents on the dollar and interest—and what is left, the other ordinary claimants if there are any, may have.

U. S. an Expert Accountant.

It's simple. The action is taken under Section 2138 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which set forth that if the taxes are not paid at the proper time they become a lien against the property of the person owing such taxes. Not only the tax itself, but the interest and all costs are included in that lien, and the longer you dodge those taxes the bigger the bill the government will collect in the end.

None of the slick liquor sellers paid any taxes for the liquor they peddled around, so they violated the revenue laws, and the liens are the next step. Bootlegger tax dodgers are all treated alike, whether they do a big business or a little business—no graduated scale for them.

The sheriff will collect the government's bill.

Bootlegging is not all profit.

UNCANNY KNOWLEDGE OF ANATOMY DISPLAYED BY SIX YEAR OLD ST. LOUIS YOUTH STARTLES MEDICOS

Told His School Teacher He Would Rather Discuss Hygiene Than Recite Rhymes.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 21.—(By Kent Watson, U. S. S. Staff Correspondent.)—When he told his school teacher that he'd rather talk on "Hygiene and Sanitation" than recite "a silly rhyme," Gene Baldwin, Starkeff, six year old son of City Health Commissioner Max C. Starkeff attracted attention.

In St. Louis now he is considered a prodigy. He possesses a very phenomenal brain, physicians declare, and destiny has so shaped it that he will become one of America's foremost surgeons or physicians.

The boy, in Latin terms, is able to give technical definitions of all parts of the human anatomy. Further, he is able to describe the functions of the body's organs. The best physicians here have been unable to rattle him with puzzling questions.

In his father's office the youth pours over books on medical science. His hours at home, when not spent in arduous play, are spent in studying a chart of the human body.

"That story about stork bringing newcomers is all bunk," declares the youth, who has reasoned to his own satisfaction that humans enter the world much after the fashion of new born chickens or other baby animals.

"The boy's knowledge of anatomy would shame the average well-educated doctor," one of the leading physicians here declares. "He is a marvel."

RIETH CITIZEN DIES AT HOSPITAL IN THE DALLES

(East Oregonian Special.) RIETH, Ore., July 21.—The news of Rite Sam Winchester's death was telegraphed here Sunday. He passed away in the hospital at The Dalles early Sunday morning after an illness of 45 days. Mr. Winchester is a blacksmith at the round house and he with his little son have been living in the home he purchased last February from H. L. Tompkins.

Mr. W. Clark returned Friday from a few days' business trip to Portland. Mrs. Jack Ross of Helix spent the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. English.

Walter Crane had a painful accident Saturday. While standing in a swing his feet slipped off the board and he fell. As the swing came back over him the board struck him on the head, inflicting quite an ugly wound. He was able to deliver the East Oregonian Saturday evening as usual.

The farmers around Rich are very busy in the fields now harvesting their grain.

E. M. Woods returned Friday from a short business trip in Idaho. Montie Fletcher has been having quite a serious time for the past four weeks from blood poisoning in her left arm, caused by a cat scratch.

Mrs. John Heath was visiting friends in Rich Monday when she stopped here on her way home to Pleasant Valley, from The Dalles.

Mr. and Mrs. White and children have returned from their vacation.

VERILY WAYS OF WOMEN ARE HARD TO EXPLAIN

HELENA, Mont., July 21.—(A. P.) Verily, the ways of a woman are hard to explain. At least that is the observation of R. S. Mentrum, state fire marshal, who tells the story of the old lady of Livingston whose obstinacy was the worry of the city council, the fire chief, her neighbors—and even Mr. Mentrum.

This old lady owned a most snugly barn in the center of a new residential section that prided itself on being rather exclusive and upon the architectural beauty of its bungalow and garages. Also the old lady refused to sell her property, she refused to move the barn and it is said, told two of the neighborhood committees that she would stand "but" among other things. So the residence addition folk called on the fire chief to condemn it as a nuisance and a fire trap.

The fire chief did his bit, but the old lady carried the battle to the city council and declared she would fight it right through to the supreme court. The state fire marshal was called and again the structure was ordered condemned. The old lady kept her promise and filed an action in court which acted as a temporary stay on the order of destruction.

Two squads of hammering and sawing were heard by the neighbors coming from within the barn. Naturally they thought that it was being repaired to pass muster as a safe structure on the day of the trial, however, the case was dismissed on the old lady's motion. Immediately the fire authorities prepared to finish the structure before a new legal move was started.

When they gained access to the barn they found there a tiny, but wholly charming bungalow. All that remained to be done was to tear away the old walls. It was done and the surprised neighbors were happy while officials were very much relieved.

UNREST IS PREVALENT AMONG JAPAN LABORERS

By HENRY W. KINNEY, United Press Staff Correspondent.

TOKYO, July 21.—After the great crop of strikes and other labor disturbances which culminated during the war years of prosperity, when the supply of labor was so far short of the demand that the workmen were able to enforce almost the demands they set for to make, the period following a slump which began in March of last year, was remarkably free from strikes. Unemployment became common again, and the movements of the workmen are marked by a growing desire for what they call "strike action." While this term, as used here, is not necessarily meant to believe it is evident that the workers are showing a tendency towards opposition to constituted authority, and the police authorities are worried considerably thereby.

Socialist inheritings are constantly being broken up, although they appear to be no more dangerous than in many such movements elsewhere, and socialists and labor leaders often find themselves under watch by police forces and frequently banished to police stations for explanations. In Osaka the electric light station workers recently went on strike, leaving the city of Japan in darkness, and several clashes occurred between thousands of strikers and their sympathizers with the police, in the course of which many were injured. The red flag, often displayed and the old-time ritual respect for the police is rapidly disappearing.

The unrest and growing disregard for government authority is also showing up conspicuously among the students of various institutions at strikes on the part of student bodies have been frequent.

While all these movements, both of students and laborers are not as dangerous in themselves, they indicate plainly a steadily swelling tide of unrest, but while the authorities are only too well aware of this, the means by which they take to stem it have so far been utterly ineffectual.
