CHASED BY BLUE SNAKE.

PONTIAC, Mich., July 23.—(U. N. S.)—A blue racer snake, measuring 6 feet, attacked Arthur Bigelow, a farmer residing near Holly, recently. The snake chased Bigelow for some distance until Bigelow, finding a club, turned and killed the racer.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

ALTA SUNDAY AND MONDAY BORROWED FINERY WORKS WONDERS

Borrowed finery, which played such an important part in the life of Rowena Jones, the check-room girl heroine of "You Never Can Tell," Bebe Daniels' first starring picture, again enters the plot of that star's latest release, "Two Weeks With Pay," which comes to the Alta tomorrow.

In this picture Miss Daniels plays a shop girl, whose employer equips her with a very gorgeous wardrobe and sends her off to an expensive hotel, hoping that her beauty will attract attention and advertise his costumes.

The first part of the plot works out very well. Pretty Pansy does attract attention. Somebody starts the rumor that she is a famous actress resting inognito. Pansy's fine clothes seem to bear this out. The plot thickens when the guest at the hotel insist on showering her with attention, and the real actress arrives on the scene. Jael Mulhall again plays the male lead, as he did in the first Daniels' picture.

ARCADE SUNDAY AND MONDAY SHOULD A WIFE OPEN HER HUSBAND'S LETTERS?

Should a wife open her husband's letters? Is it more reprehensible to hold back a letter than to open it? If a wife does not open her husband's mail, but holds back a letter which she believes will disrupt her household, is she less dishonest than if she had opened it and acted upon it?

The action of Lois Weber's latest photoplay, "Too Wise Wives," hinges upon a wife's decision regarding a letter which comes to her husband with a crest upon it which she instantly recognizes. What she does with the letter provides one of the most intensely interesting situations of the play.

"Too Wise Wives" is another of those delightful photoplays of life in the best American society which have created a large following for Lois Weber. Women flock to see Lois Weber plays. There's a reason. It is a Paramount picture and will be shown at the Arcade theatre Sunday and Monday.

The story deals with the trials of a young wife whose devoted attention to her husband weary him and cause him to yearn for the society of his former sweetheart who has married a wealthy man. Then follows developments that narrowly wreck the lives of two wives and their husbands. Claire Windsor and Louis Calhern play the leading roles. Phillips Smalley and Mona Lisa also are in the cast.

PASTIME SUNDAY AND MONDAY Greenwich Village with all its romance and color is accurately depicted as a background for the story and the principal players enact their roles as members of the artistic Bohemia realistically.

"The Mad Marriage" was directed by Rollin Sturgeon from the successful novel, "Cinderella Jane," by Marjorie Benton Cooke, and from an adaptation by Marion Fairfax. Those who have read the story will particularly appreciate the screen interpretation.

The story deals with "Cinderella Jane," a girl who durns socks and keeps house for a clique of scatterbrained artists in one of the tumble-down studio buildings overlooking Washington Square. One of her clients is Jerry Paxton, a young artist who is being swept to success on a wave of popularity by the die rich women of the city. As an artist and social lion he is desired by he dowages as a son-in-law. As accident insurance against a marriage that might interfere with his work he marries Jane.

Then things happen with each brilliant rapidity that the climax comes with a shock. In the end the girl finds a new kind of happiness and the man discovers that his career is just another way of being selfish.

We notice that Lester Cronin, our postmaster, has returned after a trip to the East. Back at the old stamping ground, as it were.

In a Class With Influenza Headlines dealing with the stillman divorce have been many and varied, but the one which appeals to me most is one in a recent issue of the Albany Herald, to wit: "Stillman Agony May Continue Into Winter."

"George," she said, "Before I give you a final answer you must tell me something! Do you drink anything?" A smile of relief lighted his countenance—was that all she wanted to know? Proudly, triumphantly he clasped her in his arms and whispered: "Anything."

Beards About the most useless thing we know of is a Van Dyke beard. Too long to be used as a soup strainer and too short to protect the vest at meal time.

In the brave days of old before Volstead's name was listed in Who's Who, there was a certain farmer who formed the habit of celebrating on his monthly trips to town for his supplies.

One afternoon, at the close of one of these excursions, feeling weak and low, he stumbled to where he had left his team, only to find that someone had unhitched the horses and driven them away. "Erza Perkins," he said to himself sadly, passing a hand over his brow, "If you're Erza Perkins, you've lost a pair of durn good horses, but if you ain't Erza Perkins you've found a durn good wagon."

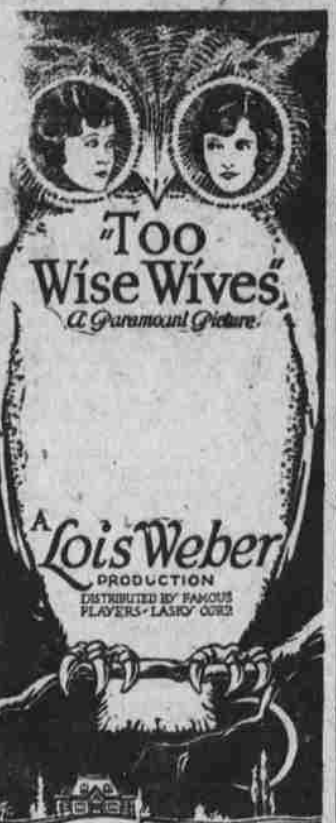

Salth the Sage If you put 40 percent of your time into minding your own business and 40 percent into letting other peoples' business alone you'll get into very little trouble.

Because it rained today may we be pardoned for remarking that the best time to catch soft water is when it is raining hard?
