Japanese Influence From Paris!

International complications seem to threaten the fashion world Lord & Taylor, New York, are showing new parasols—straight from Paris—which are adaptations of the paper Japanese umbrella. Figured silk crepes pleated like paper form the outside while a lining protects the user from the sun. Other novelties are the "mushroom" and parasols representing orchids and roses.

ARREST OF MRS. BURKETT ON FORGERY CHARGE RECALLS FAMOUS WOMEN SWINDLERS

Woman Awaiting Trial is Accused of Forging Name of Late Col. Theodore Roosevelt

(Written by Margery Rex for International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Following in the furtive footsteps of one whom she called "Godess" and whom she served as personal maid, Mrs. Emma Richardson Burkett, of Indiana, is in the Tombs awaiting trial on the charge of forgery.

Forging the name of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt on a note for $5,000 is the charge against the woman, who once waited upon that spook priestess and adventuress whom it is alleged she has since emulated, Ann Odella Dias De Bar.

Her former mistress's startling career is recalled to mind by the arrest of Mrs. Burkett, who has been positively identified as her maid. But the prisoner, although charged once before with a similar offense, does not handle her alleged crimes with the same broad sweep of imagination that characterized Dias De Bar.

Divorced wife of General Dias De Bar, the notorious woman swindler married Theodore Jackson in Chicago, and with him perpetrated many and various types of crime, including a religious cult.

Dias De Bar's most notorious venture was the deluding of an old man of wealth and artistic taste. Luther Marsh of New York, whom she defrauded by means of "spook pictures," the canvases, which were found, to have been painted by her husband, an artist of no small ability, were smeared over with chalk, which she rubbed off at scenes, thus fooling the victim, who believed his enslaver's hands were guided by the spirits of dead artists.

For this hoax the "Godess of the Snow," got a sentence of twelve years. But later she and Jackson appeared in London with their notorious cult, "theocratic unity," the machinations of which brought them to the attention of Scotland Yard.

The practices of their demonic cult were barred to a schooled public. A London court sentenced Jackson to fifteen years in jail and Dias De Bar to seven. But the "Queen" of her followers survived, and finally came back to the United States to appear in vaudeville.

Not the least of her remarkable claims was Dias De Bar's constant assertion that she was the daughter of the likewise notorious Lola Montez, one-time favorite of the post-king Ludwig I of Bavaria, now long since resting in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, under a slab which says simply "Mrs. Eliza Gilbert."

Career of Lola Montez
Lola Montez's career was distinguished if not for financial swindling at least for the vicissitudes of her love affairs. An "eloper"—at seventeen—with a young English officer, so as to avoid an unwelcome match, she was soon deserted by her husband, who found another lady more to his liking. Little did the young bridegroom realize that the young damsel he neglected would yet be the prize for whom kings and princes would compete.

Irish and Spanish blood combined in the make-up of the darling Lola who captivated the city billed as "Dolores Montez" a dancer. She could not dance any too well, but it is said her beauty made other qualifications unnecessary for success. Her eccentricities became famous and often led to her banishment from various towns she visited, whose staid inhabitants would have none of the caprices of the dancer. At the age of twenty-seven she met Ludwig, King of Bavaria. He was sixty and it is said she represented to him the beauty and poetry of life that the exigencies of his stern career had kept repressed in his nature. She became his favorite and was given the title of Countess Landfeldt and a villa in the Bavarian Alps.

Died Unmarried
Lola ruled over Ludwig's affections until 1848, when European ferment

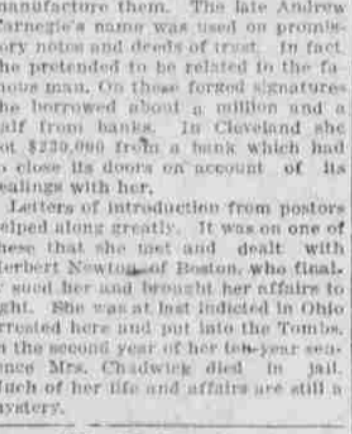

How Chadwick Worked

Her psychology of approaching a victim has been highly praised. The cash-loving Cassie always had a roll of hundred-dollar bills with her, which she displayed carelessly when discussing a possible loan. To insure promptness in negotiating her wishes, she always offered a little "bonus" to her victim. "This was usually halved to him supposedly experienced as vindication of her honesty and financial integrity."

Found Men Easy
She paid one loan with another and started an endless chain of indebtedness. She needed securities and, being of a resourceful nature, proceeded to manufacture them. This late Andrew Carnegie's name was used on promissory notes and deeds of trust. In fact, she pretended to be related to the famous man. On these forged signatures, she borrowed about a million and a half from banks. In Cleveland she got $250,000 from a bank which had to close its doors on account of its dealings with her.

Letters of introduction from postors helped along greatly. It was on one of these that she met and dealt with Herbert Newington of Boston, who finally would her and brought her affairs to light. She was at last indicted in Ohio arrested here and put into the Tombs. In the second year of her ten-year sentence Mrs. Chadwick died in jail. Much of her life and affairs are still a mystery.

FINE FRIENDS $5.
LAWRENCE, Mass., Aug. 2.—Punching each other in the face is claimed to be the customary friendly greeting of two Lawrence foundrymen, one of whom, Thomas Norton, on Thomas Dooley, in lieu of a handshake Norton struck Dooley playfully. The police did not approve of the idea and a court appearance for both men resulted. Dooley explained to Judge J. J. Mahoney, saying: "Captain, be easy with Norton. It is our usual way of greeting each other, only perhaps this time Norton was a bit rough." The court made the fine $5.

President Harding recently broke a presidential precedent when he dropped in unexpectedly on the senators in the midst of their luncheon hour and ate with some of his old associates in the senate.
