States is still to them the land of freedom, and the report that their coming is about to be curtailed has raised an awful furor among its leading immigrants.

U. S. Passengers in Fury.
 If the law merely stipulated that when a nation had sent us 2 per cent of its 1910 population no more would be admitted there would be no difficulty; the trouble could simply be shipped back home, with Uncle Sam's regrets. But this 1-5 of 2 per cent each month business has their all together. It did not take the way foregone long to catch onto the joker and turn the trick against us. Eight little nations used up their quotas during July, which was the first month. When in some amount covered the list of the month, and the list of the first month, they were too late because of the month's quota being full, and put back. They did not.

Much to the disgust, even to the fury of some hundreds of American citizens who happened to be passengers, eight little transatlantic liners due late in July calmly delivered their arrival in New York until the first of the month. One, the Meadi, Italian, a Greek liner, with 130 Americans aboard, arrived off the coast July 29 and despite the rage and hair raising of the United States officers, dropped anchor and stayed there just outside the three-mile limit, until August 2nd.

The Joker has a Brother.
 Several other liners, one big one from Italy among them, followed suit. On the stroke of midnight, when July became August, there was a grand rush across the line. With a tooting of whistles the immigrant-bearing convalescent swept down upon the list and. Their passengers would have been in excess of the first month's quota, but this was August now, and that was another matter.

It is reasonable to suppose, immigration officials say, that this performance will be repeated around September 1 and again the first of each month until at midnight, November 30, the last grand rush begins.

To cope with the situation it has been decided by local officials that all surplus immigrants shall be admitted upon personal bonds, if they can get them, until October 1. It is hoped that a federal law, somewhat less exacting, will be enacted before the time. It is believed that the framers of the present measure, which is temporary, failed to see the jazy effects of their legislation.

So the immigrants who wait outside the line until the new month begins are really wasting their time, because they could get in anyway. But they don't know it—so the game is just as exciting as though it were real.

ALIENS TRY TO EVADE IMMIGRATION RULES

BY FRANK GETTY.
 International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—When we were kids we used to play a game called "Ten Steps," in which whoever was "it" stood with closed eyes and counted rapidly to ten, the others rushing from a starting point in an effort to be the first to the counter. Anyone caught moving after "ten" had been counted had to go back and start over.

It is much the same game which would be immigrants to the United States play these days. The rules are the law "14-16" of any one country, which sounds like beer, but which is really an attempt to check immigration. Olga and Carlo and Boris start from the other side and rush for the land of the free, trying to reach Ellis Island before the quota man says "ten." If he catches them on the move they have to go back and try all over again the first of next month.

The new law, which has been effective for about two months, has certainly jangled up the business of immigration. It provides that the number of immigrants from any one country be limited to 2 per cent of that nation's 1910 population. And it has a joker which says that only 1-5 of that 2 per cent shall come in in any one month.

Now with a country like Germany, which had about a million population in 1910 and has sent less than 500 here since the law became effective last June, the new restrictions don't matter very much. But when it comes to Greece, Poland, Turkey and some of the smaller nations, they are champing up their quotas in record time and waiting for more. The United
