SIR THOMAS LIPTON ABANDONS IDEA TO COMPETE AGAIN FOR AMERICAN CUP IN YACHT RACE

Lack of Finances Given by His Associates as Cause of Decision Not to Try Once More.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(I. N. S.)—Sir Thomas Lipton has definitely abandoned the idea of challenging again for the America's Cup, according to his most intimate friends here. He has even given up ordinary yachting in Great Britain.

Sir Thomas, when questioned, hides his decision with the statement that "he does not wish to discuss the matter at the present moment." But his yachting associates of former days refer to his decision freely.

"It is mainly a question of finance," said one of them recently. "To come down to cold facts Lipton is not rich enough to take up the challenge again solely on his own account."

Bears All Expenses

"There are several questions to be considered. First of all when Lipton challenges the cup is defended by a syndicate, every member of which is probably a richer man than Sir Thomas. On the other hand, he has to bear all the expenses unaided.

"Then last year's race cost him a big fortune. From the three the Shamrock was first designed in 1913 until the moment which she was finally defeated and Lipton returned to England it is estimated that the challenge cost him no less than $2,500,000.

"It requires a great deal of consideration before such a sum can be risked again.

"And it must be remembered that a new challenger would be far more expensive than the last. Since 1914 materials are anything up to 500 per cent higher. Lipton used to be able to hire the best sailors in England for $5 weekly; now the humblest members of the crew require a minimum of $25.

Lipton's Business Hurt

"Apart from this, Lipton's business, like every other in this country, has been going through a bad spell on account of the trade depression. Shareholders are complaining that they no longer receive dividends at the old rate. They complain that Lipton has not been giving the same personal attention to the business as before. If he took a long holiday from England now, and at the same time embarked on a huge new scheme of private expenditure, their voices would be heard still louder in protest.

Finally Lipton is growing old. Great as is his personal ambition to win the cup—and he would give every penny he possesses to do so—he knows that he could not bear the strain and anxiety of building a new challenger.

"Nearly Broke His Heart"

"His failure last year nearly broke his heart. It followed quickly on the loss of his beloved yacht Erin in the war, when all his prized trophies went down with the ship. The two events together have shaken his spirit.

"He is a much poorer man today than he was seven years ago. He still puts all his thoughts on the America's Cup, but he realizes that no longer is it for him to attempt the challenge single-handed. If he were supported by some of the great yachting institutions, or if some wealthy men associated themselves with him, he might yet have another try.

"Otherwise, it can be taken as an accepted fact that Lipton is finished with the Cup. But he is too fine a sportsman to complain."

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE ON CONSTRUCTION OF STADIUM AT STANFORD

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 18.—(U. P.)—Construction on the mammoth stadium here was five days ahead of the engineer's schedule today, and it was expected that the great structure, which will seat 60,000 persons, will be ready for the "Big Game" with California in the fall.

More than one-third of the dirt from what will be the bottom of the bowl has been removed and construction of the bleachers commenced. A fleet of tractors is engaged in tearing up the soil in huge chunks and piling it on top of the already high surrounding mound.

SENATOR'S ATTEMPT FAILS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(I. N. S.)—An attempt, by Senator Sterling to have the senate reject the house amendment to the anti-beer bill, protecting "home brewers" from the raids of prohibition officers, failed. The objection was raised and Senator Lodge declared the matter must rest with the conference now considering the bill.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

ALTA TODAY

ALL STAR CAST IN INCE DRAMA

An all-star cast of unusual merit is featured in "Mother O' Mine," Thomas H. Ince's latest melodrama for the Associated Producers, which is featured at the Alta Theatre today.

Lloyd Hughes, Joseph Kilgore, Betty Blythe, Betty Ross Clark and Claire McDowell are the players who assume the leading characterizations.

Hughes, who for some time has appeared in leading and featured roles in Thomas H. Ince productions, recently received high critical praise for his splendid performance in Ince's "Beau Reveil."

Joseph Kilgore, stage and screen favorite, is a "heavy" of note, his success in that type of role being gauged by thousands of picturegoers who regard him as "the meanest man on the screen." Miss Blythe's beauty, combined with her dramatic capabilities, has elevated her to the upper ranks. Betty Ross Clark has, during the past year, played numerous feminine leads opposite prominent stars, while Claire McDowell, who is cast in the title role of the production, is noted for her similar characterizations in more than two score screen successes.

ARCADE TODAY CHAPLIN FILMS 140 MINES TO SCREEN HIS COMEDY

Sydney Chaplin, who will appear at the Arcade theatre today in "King, Queen, Joker," his first Paramount comedy production, is the first producer to utilize the "sky bus" as a means for quicker transportation to and from distant locations. The new means of transportation was given a trial during the making of his initial feature and was so successful that doubtless it will be in great demand in the future.

Having selected a valley in the Santa Barbara Mountains, 140 miles from the Jasper Hollywood studios as "location" for filming certain scenes, Mr. Chaplin groomed several of his air mounts for the trip and accomplished his purpose without accident in less than two hours.

The sky expedition, including star, cameraman, director, supporting players and necessary equipment, left the studio at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. Two hours later the Santa Barbara location was reached and after a safe landing the company commenced work.

After the scenes were filmed the return trip was made and the party arrived in Hollywood after an absence of only eight hours. Under the circumstances, Mr. Chaplin said, the trip would have necessitated several days.

In the Robertson-Cole super-special picture, "The First Born," starring Sessue Hayakawa, which will be shown for the first time today at the Pastime Theatre, what has been pronounced by experts as the most picturesque Chinese fishing village ever constructed for a motion picture, is shown. The setting is perfect for the reason that Robert Ellis, art director and Colin Campbell, general director of the picture, spent many weeks in the supervision of construction and in locating the spot.

Far away from the Hollywood studio in Hollywood, on the banks of a quiet river in Northern California, the fishing village was built especially for the picture. It is so accurate in detail as to convince almost any Oriental that the scenes had been taken in China. Quaint Chinese houses were built amid wild rice and bamboo. The funny little wharves, on stilts, extending into the water are here. The strangely woven fish baskets and the creek's net drying, lend color to the scene.
