

SIX MEMBERS OF 'GOOD KILLERS' GANG JAILED

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(U. P.)—The murder victims of "the good killers," a gang of New York hired assassins, may total over 100, detectives investigating the conspiracy estimate. Six alleged members are now being held in the tombs in connection with the murder of Darnico Cabbo. The bloody trails of the "good killers" are being followed to many important cities all over the country. Most of the gang's murders occurred in New York, Chicago and Detroit.

Two typical southwestern products are to be perpetuated when a huge bronze with spirited figures of cowboys and longhorn steer is placed in the state house grounds at Austin, Texas. The old-time cowboy is now nearly extinct and fat Herefords have replaced the longhorn.

KEEN MINDS OF U. S. WOMEN ARE ADMIRER

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(U. P.)—"I find on the whole that American women are better informed and more alert on world affairs than English women. You have few women of exceptional ability."

"There is a great demand in America," she says, "for women's points of view on feminist questions, as we have not had the vote very long and are keen to know how other countries are dealing with all the women problems which arise out of the war."

"A democracy does not tend to produce exceptional types. Women at home are doing a very great deal in local matters, and our men are disposed to turn over local matters to the women, who are working to secure better sanitation, education, etc."

"A man who votes will call up his wife on the telephone and say: 'Mother, how did you tell me to vote on the new sanitation question?'"

"Do you see any difference in England since you were here before?"

"Women Better Dressed." "It is ten years since I was here," Mrs. Austin replied. "I see a vast improvement in the dress of the working classes. I do not see any more dingy hand-me-downs on the women, and the men are better groomed."

"Then I notice, too a changed attitude in the way the English people treat Americans—they are more cordial. I think the working classes have improved in every way enormously."

"I'm rather disturbed to see so many American films in London. I've walked miles to find a British film. I am particularly interested in films, as I write scenarios myself."

"But what worries me is that the films do not represent American life and therefore give false ideas of our social and working life."

"Our stenographers do not wear ropes of pearls and sable wraps as the films from over there would lead one to believe."

Mrs. Austin is the founder of the Community Theatre movement, and it is to lecture on this subject also that she has come to London.

Corrects Divorce Fallacy. "Now about the fallacy that Americans are always being divorced—it is entirely wrong. The average people in America are happy. But all the literature we get from England deals with marital troubles, of unpleasant subjects in life."

Criticizing Englishwomen, Mrs. Austin expressed surprise that so many were so keen on sport and spent so much of their leisure on the tennis courts or golf links.

Mrs. Austin has had a life of excitement that many a biographer would crave to write. For many years she lived with Indians in the deserts of Arizona, California and New Mexico, studying their modes of life.

She has a scar on her arm which tells the story of an eagle which swooped down to steal her baby one day in her gardens. She tells of thrilling escapades when she had to kill or search for food.

Then to New York, at the age of 20, when she began to write books and poems and scenarios, and she is now one of the leaders in the women's world in America.

LEADS DOUBLE LIFE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—There's no getting around it, James Williams, a negro, led a dual personality existence. He had a dual personality, had James; that is, until he ran afoul of the law for disregarding Mr. Volstead's precepts.

Williams was haled into federal Judge K. M. Landis' court on a charge of operating an illicit still.

"What is your occupation?" inquired the court.

"I work night times for the city—driving a sprinkling wagon," Williams replied.

"Humph," remarked the judge. "On the water wagon at night and making booze in the daytime, eh?"

James got thirty days.

Sour Stomach

When the quantity of food taken is too great or the quality too rich, sour stomach may result and especially so if you are constipated. Eat slowly, masticate your food thoroughly, eat sparingly of meats. Let fully five hours elapse between meals and when you feel a fullness and weight in the stomach, after eating your supper, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets, and in most cases sour stomach may be avoided.
