

MONSTER BOILERS ARE INSTALLED BY FORD

The largest power house boilers in the world are now being installed in one of the Ford Motor Company's Detroit plants. To demonstrate just how big they really are, eight full-grown Ford cars were driven into one of them recently.

The cars were lined up just outside the building, they one at a time, they were driven inside, caught up in a rope sling, hoisted to the second floor and driven into the huge boiler. Each boiler is enclosed in brick settings, with specially designed furnaces for burning pulverized coal. This in itself is a new feature in this kind of a boiler. While some experiments have been made with pulverized coal, yet, no boiler has ever before been specially constructed to use it. But Henry Ford departs easily from precedent in power producing plants, and once satisfied that pulverized coal is practical, he ordered special equipment designed and built for the new Power House.

The boiler furnace will consume eighteen tons of coal an hour. The coal, which is ground so fine that it passes through an unusually fine screen, is fed into the furnace from near the top. Inside, it is caught by an air current which keeps it in circulation, and it is burned while in suspension. It touches neither the sides nor the bottom of the furnace, until as ashes it drops underneath into an ash pit.

From the time the coal for these boilers leaves the Ford mines in West Virginia and Kentucky until it is carried away as ashes it is never handled by hand. All of the operations are handled mechanically—dumping, pulverizing, carrying to the bins, stoking, even to carrying the ashes away in small dump cars.

A battery of eight of these boilers is being built; one is already completed and operating successfully.

NO CHANGE IS SEEN IN MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON, Sept. 3.—(U. S. S.)—Approximately 125,000 persons are out of employment in this state, according to figures furnished by the Division of Statistics of the Department of Labor. The state has a population of 3,552,356.

The number of persons in manual occupations in 1,710,356. It is estimated that 25 per cent of the organized workers of the state are out of employment and in excess of 20 per cent of the unorganized.

The situation has remained almost unchanged during the past six months. Gains in some lines have been cancelled by losses in others.

If all the sea dried up, it has been estimated that the salt deposit left would form a covering one mile thick over a million square miles.

The Blue and the Gray

The blue and the gray certainly seem to have formed a permanent alliance. The smart Louis Grauer gown of drappella is combined with krummer and indestructible chiffon voile. Krummer is used in bands on the sleeves and on the high collar and buttons while the indestructible gray voile forms long drapes at the side which reach below the ankle.
