YANK WOOPER WITH CAVE MAN METHODS DISTRACT BELGIAN MAID; FRENCH MORE GENTLE

Came to U. S. as Typist, Hoping to Marry But Found Man Was 'Boss'; Hard to Manage

BY DOROTHY HUSKE
(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—What is the stuff that ideal husbands are made of?

The American, with his caveman methods, falls far short of the ideal of Mlle. Julie Jarry. She has thought it over and decided that a Frenchman will submit more gracefully to feminine management.

This coy young Belgian miss came from Brussels eight months ago to Cleveland. Object, matrimony. A typist with the American Army in France, she became enamored to a young lieutenant in the A. E. F. To Mlle. Julie an "American" was almost as great as God.

But America, with its strange new freedom—its emancipation of women—has left Miss Jarry cold.

"I Will Marry Jules"
"No, no," she declares, in accent naive and charming, "I will go back to my country. I will marry Jules. In America the man is 'boss.' In America the man is 'boss.'" With this the Belgian girl lightly dismisses her erstwhile fiance and turns her thoughts toward Jules and Paris.

Jules is another story. Since they were "kiddies" lying side by side in Brussels, Jules has always been the adoring slave of Julie, Julie persistently, though gently, discouraged the attentions of the French boy.

Then, just at the peak of her disappointment in her caveman lover, her ardor for America chilled, came a letter with a foreign postmark. Which proves that Jules was right there when opportunity knocked.

Now comes the "old, old story."

Sales Back to France
Julie sails for France this month. She will be married and spend her honeymoon in Paris. Then she will go with Jules to live in Oppelen, Silesia, where he is an inspector for the Secret Service.

"There is much of charminess about America," says Mlle. Jarry, with a beguiling smile, "your hospitality is so lovely. I will come back some day, with my 'usband.'"

If you speak of the great war to Julie (she was twice held in German prison camps), her sunny expression is clouded for an instant, and her eyes seem to see horrible things. You wait intently for the strange story she is about to tell. Then she brightens and speaks with a confidential air:

"But wait, I will tell you something! I have a secret ambition in me. After I am married I am going to write a book. You will read it—no?"

BOARDMAN CLOSES VERY SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION

(East Oregonian Special.)

BOARDMAN, Sept. 16.—The echo of wrecking the booths of the North Morrow County Fair is in our ears as we write the chronicle of the very successful exhibition staged at Boardman on Tuesday the 13th. Irrigon and Boardman were out in force. The fair was arranged in three sections, Boardman East End, and West End and Irrigon. The first two were in competition and the East End won. All Boardman was in competition with Irrigon and Irrigon won owing to its very elaborate display of fruits, with which the younger project of Boardman could not compete. The extent of the exhibit is shown by the fact that over 100 firms and over 70 sections were distributed. Cafeteria lunch was served at noon and evening, followed by dancing and a splendid musical and literary program. The committees are to be especially commended for their untiring work in making the fair a success and they express the appreciation of all help given. Officers chosen for next year are C. E. Glasgow, Irrigon, president; vice presidents, N. Seaman and C. H. Dillabaugh; H. H. Crawford, secretary-treasurer. It is hoped to work out a plan whereby the Morrow county fair may be held in the North End once in three years.
