PARTY IS ENJOYED

Old-time friends of Mrs. R. Alexander were guests last evening at an enjoyable surprise party for which Mrs. H. E. Beckers, Mrs. Frank Prager, Mrs. Charles Hamilton and Mrs. J. F. Robinson were hostesses at the Robinson home, the occasion being in honor of Mrs. Alexander's birthday anniversary.

About twenty couples were present and spent the evening in dancing, refreshments being served later. Mrs. Alexander was complimented by the presentation of a beautiful hall mirror and candlesticks. Miss Ida Boyd made the presentation and read an original poem. This was followed by original verses written by Mrs. W. R. Mays, and also by Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. James Welch.

IDEAS FOR HOUSEWIVES HOME DEMONSTRATION

(First in a Series of Articles on Bread)

Bread is the largest single item on the diet of the great majority of people. Wheat and grain products are used to the extent of about a pound a day in the average family. The amount of protein in these products is too low to make them a perfectly balanced food. It is probable that if bread were always well made it would be used in larger quantities than it is at present.

Per pound there is more food value in bread than in milk, eggs or beef steak at about one tenth the cost.—E. V. D.

SURGEON, CUTTING OUT WRINKLES, GETS INSIGHT INTO WOMAN'S THOUGHTS

Looks, Good Looks, React Favorably Upon Individual Who Possesses Them Says Doctor

By MARGERY REX. (Written for the International News Service.)

British wags asked him if he could raise the face value of the pound note. For that's one of the many surgical feats for which Dr. Leroy Stoddard, of this city, has gained distinction, face lifting and other branches of cosmetic and plastic surgery.

From tired women he lifts burdens along with wrinkles. From worried wives who have lost the gay look of youth that won them a husband's love he takes away mental turmoil as well as sagging cheeks. He is the sworn enemy of the crow's foot and of the little parentheses of wrinkles that too often enclose a woman's mouth.

Dr. Stoddard returned from Europe the other day on the Olympic.

Studies Woman's Vagaries.

In addition to his surgical achievements, Dr. Stoddard, the husband of Alice Nie Leen, the opera singer is quite a psychologist and a deep student of the vagaries of feminine natures.

"The psychology of looks is an important phase of life. Looks have a tremendous power. Surgery applied to correct facial defects is now an accomplished fact and is one of the acknowledged branches of academic activity," he said recently.

"It is possible to a great extent to remove the marks of time or accident. Good looks affect the very heart and soul. If a woman is conscious that she looks well, that she is exquisitely groomed; if her hair, as well as her gown, is correct, she will be completely at ease. Her satisfaction will be reflected in her manner. She will have complete control of herself both in speech and demeanor—nearly always in thought, too.

"That famous character, Sherlock Holmes, said, you remember, that men see, but they don't observe. And that was the only difference between himself and other men.

"How fortunate that all men don't admire the same type of woman! How fortunate that whatever a certain man may see in a certain woman is always a mystery to other people. The cause of such attraction is something we cannot understand.

"But it has nothing to do with looks.

"Looks—good looks—react favorably upon the individual who possesses them, not necessarily for anyone else.

"The eye operation is my special hobby," Dr. Stoddard smiled. "By this the wrinkles and sagging thin skin above and below the eyes is tightened and the whole appearance thereby rejuvenated.

"It is a simple procedure. The sutures are removed in forty-eight hours.

Ambrine Solves Trouble.

"Much of the trouble in the past, for instance, in removing disfigurement due to burns or accident, was due to the surgical dressing which had to be applied. They became matted into the surface. When taken out they tore unendurably at the new flesh. That condition is all changed now.

"Ambrine has brought about the difference. It is a form of paraffin. A coating of this substance is poured into the wound fairly warm and it cools on the surface; then gauze is put over all to hold the shape. There is no sticking or discomfort associated with the process.

"Cartilage is used extensively in facial operations now. It is taken (green—meaning 'fresh') from the ribs and placed where needed on the face. Major H. D. Gillies, of London, has got wonderful results with it.

"In London I met the major in Queen's Hospital, which has been an emergency hospital for facial cases. There nine hundred facially mutilated soldiers were treated during and after the war.

Faces and Spirits Made Over.

"The wounded soldier is made into a person who does not fear to be seen. Often sides of a face, or the center of it, or the entire jaw is blown away. But the hospital reports one thousand per cent improvement, nevertheless.

"Features can be built out upon these faces; one side can often be developed to match the uninjured portion of the face. Celluloid jawbones can be put in in some cases where the destruction of the surrounding flesh has not been too complete.

"In London one sees frightfully wounded soldiers all about. In Paris nothing of the sort is visible at least.

"England is much worse off now than France.

"England is dull and stupid. Yet some wag asked me to lift the face value of the pound note.

"These poor ex-soldiers one sees covered with medals abound in London. They are accompanied by some one who tries to collect money, while the impoverished ex-warrior plays pitifully on some musical instrument. They display their deformities, of course.

"Never in France have I seen such spectacles. Maybe this is part of a campaign to keep France happy and gay, to turn a pleasant face toward the tourists. France is undoubtedly making a play for the travelers, while England is asleep.

"I want to say that I didn't see in Europe any skirts as short as those in New York.

"We are an extreme people and overdo things."
