LOCAL SIDELIGHTS

Pauline Frederick for awards to the winners of the wild horse race are used. The five girls wear real Round-Up sombreros, loaned for the occasion by Bond Brothers.

The Eugene State Band, most of whom are University of Oregon students, caused a thrill among U. of O. alumni when they played "Mighty Oregon," the war cry of the college in struggles on the gridiron.

Old Glory floats from each of the crowd's nests at the Round-Up grounds. The national colors are a feature of all the decorations.

Miss Helen Thompson, queen of the Round-Up, took her first airplane ride today, going aloft with Pilot A. H. Leas of the La Grande Airplane Co., accompanied by Miss Elsie Fitzmaurice, one of her maids. Miss Thompson and her house-guest, Miss Susan Irwin, of Astoria, will visit the clouds again tomorrow with Pilot Parmalee.

Senator George W. Joseph of Portland is a Round-Up visitor, having driven up yesterday. The senator was last here in February when he participated in the conference over the Umatilla rapids project. He is earnestly interested in the generating of hydro electric power on the Columbia river.

George Aiken, publisher of the newspaper at Ontario, is here attending the executive committee of the irrigation congress and thinks this is "a good time to see the Round-Up." Mr. Aiken is one of Eastern Oregon's live wire newspapermen.

SIDELIGHTS
ETAON
"Ask Me: I Live Here," is the cheering salutation which appears on ribbons worn by Pendleton people, who are qualified to tell visitors anything they ask, with the exception of the whereabouts of Roy Gardner or whether or not it will rain at tomorrow's show.

The Round-Up shirts rival in color the trappings of the Indians. All prominent citizens are appearing in the gorgeous silk creations. Henry Collins, president of the show, is admired today in an orange and black and purple and blue and green Batik creation.

Some tourists who found the auto camp rather crowded are camped back of the Lincoln school. They declare the spot is ideal, one member of a motor party from California confiding that the Umatilla river makes an excellent bathing place.

The Northwest Grain and Hay Show, an added attraction during the Pendleton Round-Up, is housed in a canvas and laced hay structure on Main street. The hay is valued at $1,000 and after the show will be sold to Penland Brothers. It was bought by the Association from the Oregon and Washington Hay Growers Associations.

E. P. Marshall, judge at the Round-Up, is a familiar figure in the arena, for he has served for three years in this capacity. H. P. Whitman is new to the game as is Henry L. Corbett, of Portland, although both are considered well qualified in this line.
