The Round-Up is here and so are Paramount Pictures

Both are good shows. Don't miss either. Paramount Pictures draw people from longer distances than any other photoplays. "Twenty miles each way and worth it!" for the folks of the open country might be translated, "Twenty blocks each way and worth it!" to the city dweller, who may pass three or four ordinary theatres en route. Unrelenting devotion to the ideal of better entertainment, better motion pictures, has not gone unrewarded. You people with an ounce of discrimination know that Paramount Pictures are ever-lastingly there. You know by your own business judgment and experience that more than 11,200 theatres are not showing Paramount Pictures regularly merely because someone said they were better. And you know that the greatest organization in the screen industry—with magnificent studios in England and America and with a reputation for success so magnetic as to draw the greatest talent in directing, acting, authorship and screen technique—did not just happen, like the mushroom, overnight, but was laboriously cut and polished, like the diamond. And like the diamond, the brilliance of Paramount Pictures is indestructible, making men and women tireless in quest of them, knowing as they do that if it's a Paramount Picture it's the best show in town.
