WISDOM ABOVE PEACE TYPE MUST PREVAIL IN ARMS PARLEY TO ASSURE SUCCESS, SAYS EDITOR

Student of Japanese Problem on West Coast, Says More Vision is Need of Hour.

BY ELLIS H. MARTIN, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—More character, more sense and a great deal more imagination than was displayed at Versailles should enter into the November disarmament conference in Washington if it is to be a success, in the opinion of Chester Rowell, for many years a leading California editor and now a member of the state railroad commission.

Rowell recently returned from a trip to the Orient. He found in Japan much the same forces working that were uppermost in Germany before 1914, but declared that the good sense of both the United States and Japan should be able to avert a foreseen calamity.

Unity of Policy Weak. "Japan is superficially a very attractive country," Rowell declares. "Nature made it beautiful and every thing man has done has made it more so. The only ugly things in Japan are European houses and European clothes. Every native thing, even the humblest, like a woodpile or a straw stack, shows the touch of conscious art. The holidays commencing annually not the anniversary of events, but the blossoming of flowers or the pilgrimages to the famous beauty spots. It is respectable to rave over beauty in Japan and manly to write spring poetry. The same artistic sense prevails in the manners and life of the Japanese. They are a graceful, attractive people who have adorned a beautiful country. It is no wonder impressionable travelers bring back a poetized conception of Japan.

"Californians are acutely conscious that there is another side and no one who observes Japanese conditions can avoid being struck by the analogy between the present organization and situation of Japan and that of pre-war Germany. Just as there were plenty of Germans with sound views before 1914, so there are plenty of anti-militarists and liberals in Japan now. But Germany was so organized that only the forces which were driving the world toward war could make themselves effective in government. There is the same artificial unity of policy by Japan and the same obstruction in the very mechanism of government, to control by the non-militarists even if they were in the majority. The same forces are working toward the same logical end.

"But the safety is that the world, including Japan, has had Germany's warning. Forewarned is forearmed, or better still, forestalled. Long before things come to an impasse, the good sense of both countries should be able to avert a foreseen calamity. If the international experts who assemble in Washington in November to play on the chess board of diplomacy will but show a little more character, a little more sense and a great deal more imagination than their predecessors at Versailles they may demonstrate that the human race is at least morally fit to be trusted with the forces which its intelligence has discovered.

China Over-Populated. The tremendous man-power of China principally impresses Rowell. "The only thing that there is enough of in China is men," he said. "Every thing else has to be economized, but human muscle is used with deliberate extravagance. All work is done in the hardest and most inefficient way, but to make more jobs. What machines and animals do in America, men do in China. The coolie is almost the only beast of burden. But though ignorance and superstition, the coolie is not stupid. And there are four hundred million of them."

Rowell, speaking on "What I Saw in China and Japan" recently, gave some desultory observations on his recent visit to the Orient. A hasty trip, he said, gives a more moving picture glimpse but the camera can record only what appeals to the sense of sight. In a city like Canton, where two million people are crowded in a space the size of the city of Fresno, without a sewer and with the only garbage collection carried on by women with large baskets naturally there are other unphotographic sights.

"China," said Rowell, "is a human ocean, for no matter how much you pump out of the ocean the level is unchanged. Similarly, no reasonable emigration from China could decrease its population. The law of subtraction falls when crossed by the law of multiplication. The birth rate in China consists of all the child-bearing power of all its women during all their child-bearing years. Most of the children die in infancy and most of the rest die young. These swarming millions are the remainder. Except any conceivable number, even hundreds of millions, and their places would be taken immediately.

"The only possible policy for California, as the dike-keepers of the racial frontier, is 'no leakage.'"

HEALTH IS A WOMAN'S GREATEST ASSET

Contrast the cheerful happy woman with head erect, the glow of health on her cheeks, the elastic step and bubbling enthusiasm as she goes about her daily tasks, with the woman who suffers from backache, headaches, dragging-down pains, nervousness and despondency. Such conditions are undoubtedly caused by woman's ailments which will yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for many, many years has been restoring weak, ailing women to health and strength. Every woman who suffers in this way owes it to herself to at least give it a trial.
