FALL FESTIVAL OF GREATER VALUE GIVING

New Extensive Showing of Kayser and Phoenix Silk Underwear

Both these two makes of Silk Underwear is economical to buy and wear. The first cost is not high and the ease with which the garments may be laundered at home eliminates laundry bills and also insures longer service.

The fabric, being knitted, is elastic and yet retains its shape. It is less liable to tear, because it "gives" with each body movement.

These and other features have made the use of silk underwear quite universal.

KAYSER MARVELFIT ITALIAN SILK KNICKERS AND PANTALETTES

Priced According to Quality from $4.50 to $7.50.

Will not rip or tear, best for fit, wear and economy, cost no more than the ordinary kind; Knickers in flesh color only; Pantalettes in black and navy blue.

Phoenix Silk Vests

In Richelieu rib, bodice tops with ribbon shoulder straps, shown in flesh color. Priced $3.00

Phoenix Silk Bloomers

To match the vests, well reinforced with elastic at waist and knee, Richelieu ribbed. Priced $4.75

KAYSER MARVELFIT ITALIAN SILK VESTS

In bodice top, hand top, and also with no straps, which makes them especially desirable for party wear.

We are showing these Kayser vests in the different qualities in plain weaves as well as the more elaborate embroidered ones.

Priced according to quality from $3.75 to $6.25.

What Excellent Millinery

Hats Priced at $10.00

Quite notable and interesting are the new hats of velvet with their large shapes and turned back brims which circle half the length of the shape. They strike a new note in the winter modes and are attracting much attention from the women who know.

Interurban Network

Here his "inferiors," so to speak, are not fastidious. They are making motor and bus lines rich, and, doubtless, swelling the dividends which permit the swank of the land to roll along in Rolls-Royce style.

The ordinary folk of the particular province, have discovered that they can hop a bus approximately at their doorstep, and ride high in the air, overlooking high brick walls, twenty miles or so, for a shilling or two. And that, if they desire, they can take a small portion of "luggage" and spend days transferring from one line to another, and from one charabanc trip to another, traveling always through England's most beautiful country and visiting historic and picturesque spots for the sight of which Americans must pay hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Even the small towns have become great motor centers. One hotel bulletin boards of such towns as Oxford, Coventry, Canterbury, Bathstone, Stratford, and small towns all are lists of ten of a dozen separate charabanc trips to points of interest some of them providing a swing of as much as 100 miles on a single day's journey.

At any point of interest three or four of these plants of the road are to be found parked at almost any time of the day. Along the main roads they travel literally in droves. Every suburb of London has its two or three big garages whose chief business is charabanc trips, varying in cost from twenty-five cents to $4 for a full twelve-hour journey.

"See England First"

Simultaneously the two-deck motor bus, the universal means of transportation in London, where there are comparatively few street-car lines, have crept farther and farther into the country. Country lines have been established. These connect with the city lines. The buses are drawing rural England into closer contact with the towns, and one district into contact with another, just as the growth of interurban electric lines did in America twenty years ago.

Demonstrating touring possibilities of these fixed route bus lines a newspaper reporter has traveled from Dover to Blackpool, diagonally across England, a distance of about 350 miles in five days at a cost of $10 in fares, entirely on bus top. Connections over a greater distance doubtless can be made by charabanc.

In the old days (the traditional tourist was the Yankee school marm, with her guide book and spectacles.

Today whole English families, following an elected leader, who reads aloud from a "tuppenny" guide book, may be seen everywhere, brushing up on English history. Pure cockney is spoken in the land of Shakespeare by a horde of native invaders, who have adopted the slogan "See England First."

28 YEARS AGO

(From the Daily East Oregonian, October 3, 1893.)

Pears are active and numerous around mountain sheep camps. Three were killed the other day by the herders for T. J. Tweedy and E. H. Clarke, on Meadow Creek range.

Miss Jessie Nye left on Monday night's train on a visit to friends in Portland and Tacoma.

Wm. Lloyd, a leading stockman of Butter Creek and also a fruit farmer of the Milton neighborhood, was in the city Monday. Mr. Lloyd was on his way to Butter Creek from his fruit farm near Milton, where he resides.

which he will winter in Pendleton. The colt is entered in two more races in the valley, which take place this week, and no doubt will acquit himself with credit.

Last night a meteor fell northeast of Pendleton, illuminating the heavens for a moment. It looked like an air light traversing the horizon, although much more brilliant.

COTTON CROP CONDITIONS BAD
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(I. N. S.)—Cotton crop conditions are worse than at any similar period in the history of the cotton growing industry, according to the report of the department of agriculture.

Permanent Muscular Strength cannot exist where there is not blood strength. Young men giving attention to muscular development should bear this in mind. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives blood strength and builds up the whole system.

ENGLISH PEOPLE BEGIN TO SEE THEIR COUNTRY

BY EARLE C. REEVES
(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The English are beginning to "see England." The motor bus and charabanc threaten to make the Briton a tourist in his own land.

Only the third-class passenger and the "lower middle class" have been hit by the travel bus as yet, but that is a beginning, and today one can see the unprecedented sight of scores, even hundreds of English being guided about over their own historic towns. It is difficult, in English, to find anyone who has, for instance, visited Stratford, that mecca of all American tourists. So far as Merry England is concerned, Will Rogers may be right in intimating that of the two he is the William who is famous.

The upper class Englishman bores through his country to some hotel with the cryptic "A. A." or "R. A. C." sign above its door, testifying that the automobile associations have given it a report equivalent to a Bradstreet "A. A. 1." He and his family go to their favorite seaside resorts and to the inland watering places by train or motor, and the misty castles are lumped in his mind as something to be unloaded on American millionaires, and devotee the guide books.

Beneath his notice also are the big and charabanc routes which have grown by miracle in two years until they make a network of England. The upper class Englishman doesn't ride buses, nor have recourse to tired sight seeing cars that crowd nearly forty persons into a gasoline wagon that races twenty and twenty-five miles an hour through rural England.
