POLO GROUNDS, Oct. 12.—U. P.)
"Shufflin" Douglas' pitching and Ward's error in the seventh gave the Giants a close win over their Yankee rivals in the seventh game of the world's series, giving McGraw's men the edge in the series of four games to three. The final score is 2 to 1.

It was the closest game of the se les, with both teams hitting the ball hard, and with a fast fielding fre quently nipping the batting railies be fore it was well started. Both Mays and Douglas pitched great ball, only one base on balls being issued, and that by Douglas. Had Ward handled Rawling's grounder in the seventh with his customary speed, the battle would probably have gone to an extra inning. The Yanks made their first and only run when McNally singled in the second, scoring Pipp. The Giants waited until the fourth frame before getting a tally across Young singled and E. Meusel singled scoring him. In the seventh Rawlings hit an easy roller to Ward, who fumbled, and Snyder, next to but, doubled, sending the winning run across the dish.
