TEACH TEUTONS 'PEACE' ADVICE OF JANE ADDAMS

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—(U. P.)—"It was in the schools that the Germans were taught the glories of war; it must be in the schools, then, that the Germans and all other nations must be taught the glories of peace."

This was Miss Jane Addams's reply when asked point-blank how any organization of women could prevent war. Miss Addams had just returned from a tour of Continental Europe on behalf of the society of which she is president, the International Committee of Women for Permanent Peace. "My tour taught me one thing," continued Miss Addams, "and that is, though war came from the Germans it certainly appears as though lasting peace is also coming from them—at all events, if the efforts of their women count for anything. They have seen the horrors of war, and they will have no more of it."

"Already they have formed themselves into groups throughout the whole of Germany. Previously the German child—encouraged by the mothers, they admit—sang songs glorifying the good German Michel as a warrior, a conquering hero; now he is sung to as a peaceful toiler. For the change of spirit the mothers of Germany are responsible."

"The improvement in the status of the women in Vienna was the most noticeable. Before the war women there were forbidden to take part in any political movement; now every woman over twenty-one has a vote, and they are entitled to sit in the Lower and Upper Senate. Similar conditions exist in Greece, Poland, Czechoslovakia, the non-Bolshevik part of the Ukraine and nearly all the other smaller Balkan states."

FREIGHT RATES MAY FORCE ARIZONA TO SHIP COPPER THRO' MEXICO

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—(U. P.)—High freight rates to the East may force an outlet for Arizona copper mines through Mexico. Construction of a harbor at Rocky Point, in the northwest portion of St. George's Bay, Gulf of California, one hundred miles north of Guaymas, Mexico, is being seriously considered. Bartley P. Yost, American Consul at Guaymas, has advised shipping men here.

A group of harbor experts, divers, underwriters and construction engineers were recently sent to Rocky Point by the Tucson, Gila Bend & New Cornelia Railroad with the objection of reporting on the feasibility of constructing a safe and convenient tide water terminal at that place, to serve as an outlet for the products of the Arizona copper mines.

The consul was informed that the Point holds many advantages for a harbor, among them being deep water, anchorage, a good beach, protection from storms and currents, and, above all its nearness to the places of mineral production in Arizona, it being located only about 195 miles from Ajo, to which place the railroad is already constructed. It is claimed that the road would have a grade of not to

CATHERINE CALVERT
THE HEART OF MARYLAND
SPECIAL VITAGRAPH PRODUCTION

A dramatic scene occurs at the Lilacs, the ancestral home of the Calverts, when General Kendrick is forced to inform Maryland Calvert that her brother has been shot as a spy. Then follows a tense scene as the girl accuses a prisoner in the next room of being guilty of her brother's downfall. This prisoner is General Kendrick's own son. The story is told in the Vitagraph special production, "The Heart of Maryland."

exceed 1 per cent.

The high railroad freight rates on copper to the market in the Eastern part of the United States have induced the Arizona copper concerns to select Rocky Point as a logical outlet. It is reported that with the construction of a pier of 1,000 feet in length vessels up to 15,000 tons could come alongside to discharge and load.

It is confidently believed that the construction of this short railroad and terminal facilities would have a profound effect on the copper industry in the Southwest, and that its success should follow the persistent oil prospecting which has been in progress in Sonora and Lower California of recent years.

The defense questions indicated an attempt to maintain that the body was that of someone who fell from the car and broke his neck.

edly warned, time and again by the district attorney and other officers that any statements he made would be used against him at the trial.

"Chronologically I will endeavor to cover Rathie's case, and I trust you will pardon the digression I have just made."

As I said, Rathie was the first man to jump onto the jailer as agreed to by him when the plot was hatched on the bunk in his own cell. He, furthermore, on his own statement, took the jailer's gun from him, before the men proceeded into the sheriff's office proper where the tragedy took place.

Rathie Takes Guns

Furthermore, based upon his own statements, the first thing he did when he entered the sheriff's office was to search for guns and whiskey. The guns he discovered, two of them, and took them from a drawer.

During all of the time that Hart and Owens were engaged with Sheriff Taylor in the encounter which resulted in the shooting, Rathie, further on his own admissions, was engaged in a hand to hand encounter with Guy Wyrick, a close friend of the sheriff's and his only possible reason for such encounter was to keep Wyrick from assisting the sheriff. Had Wyrick been able to give such assistance no doubt the Taylor would have been alive today. At least his chance for life would have been materially increased.

You say that evidence can be produced to the effect that Rathie begged Hart not to shoot. Rathie's own story at the trial and before the grand jury disproves such a possibility. Rathie all along maintained that he was grappled in a struggle with Wyrick when the shooting took place and he had no particular knowledge of what was going on until he heard a shot fired. If, on his own statements, he had no knowledge of what was transpiring in the room until the shot was fired, how could he have warned Hart not to shoot? Rathie made no mention of this warning at the trial, although he was on the witness stand for some time and made every possible effort to save himself from the blame for his own share of the damnable proceedings, even so far as to falsify in regard to statements he previously had made to the grand jury.

As cited by the eminent jurist who wrote the opinion covering the case for the supreme court, there was but one ray of light in the whole case, and that came from Rathie, who stopped long enough to give the dying sheriff a drink of water. But Rathie's radiance is somewhat dimmed, even in that small circumstance, by the fact that he himself said at the trial, he gave the sheriff a drink of water on the order and at the direction of Neal Hart. One reading the testimony would almost believe that Rathie was ashamed of this small kindly act. And he took toll from the sheriff, as after he gave him the cup of water, he robbed the sheriff of his gun, searching through his clothes for it, regardless of the fact that the officer was lying in mortal agony.

Rathie continued to be armed after he left the jail. There was every indication that, in his desperate straits, he would have taken as many human lives as may have stood between him and his liberty.

Was Well Defended
I note what you say relative to his financial circumstances and this being a possible reason for his not being properly represented at the trial. Prominent attorneys, well qualified to

Rathie and his associates had a fair and impartial trial. In my mind there has been no miscarriage of justice. If the three under sentence of death, if there was any extenuation whatsoever, and which I do not admit, the small extenuation certainly should have been for Neal Hart, the man who fired the fatal shot. Unquestionably he was the tool of stronger mentalities than his own, and not the least among these mentalities was that of John L. Rathie judge, have told me that Rathie and his associates had a most able defense. The records further show that the defendant counsel was given a fair and probably ample remuneration. The sentiment in the community was not so strong against him that is precluded the people of the county in which the crime occurred raising a fund for the defense.
