

People Here and There

R. E. Chloupek, manager of the Smythe-Lonergan plant in Pendleton, was in Portland yesterday. He has been on a motor trip to British Columbia and through Washington.—Oregonian.

Colonel J. P. McNaught, of Hermiston, one of the most prominent residents of the west end, is in the city today. He is vice-president of the Umatilla County Farm Bureau and is here for a Farm Bureau executive committee meeting.

"Sidewalk farmers disappeared almost entirely this year," explained Roy W. Rittner yesterday afternoon. "The old practice of living in town and running out to the farm once a week to see how things are going is ancient history. Men with farms have been sticking to them, I'm in the boat. I live on the farm, come into Pendleton only on Saturday night and am back ready to work Monday morning. Haven't worked so hard in several years, and I feel better for it."

There was a big crop in Umatilla county, but it was an expensive one. Labor was high last fall and last spring, but has dropped 25 per cent. All of the farming machinery and equipment bought last year and last spring was at a high price, and even though the price did shade off a little it did not decrease as deeply as the price of wheat. Considerable wheat was sold this year at $1 a bushel, but now it is decidedly less. I sold some at a dollar and the rest I have still," Mr. Rittner, in addition to being a farmer, is president of the Oregon state senate and in that capacity under a new amendment to the constitution is the heir apparent to the governorship should the present incumbent resign or become incapacitated. Mr. Rittner has been motoring for the past two weeks and left for his Pendleton home yesterday.—Oregonian.

Talks Franklins Every Minute.
H. L. Southmeyer, of Pendleton, who has the Franklin agency in that city, is in La Grande today consulting David J. Stoddard, the new dealer for this city. Mr. Southmeyer talks Franklins every minute and he has a tale to unfold equal to a Umatilla Indian's story three days before the Round-Up.—La Grande Observer.

"I don't Know Where We're At"
This was the remark of James Johns of Pendleton, better known as "Opie Read," who for many years has been loaning money on ranches in this part of the state. Mr. Johns was on his way to North Powder and stopped off for a short stay in La Grande. "No one knows and no one can tell what a farm is worth any more," he said. "For nobody wants to farm and when nobody farms there is something going to happen."—La Grande Observer.

Mr. Landreth Speaks.
Austin Landreth, principal of the Pendleton high school, gave an excellent talk this morning at the high school, to the Umatilla county teachers who assembled for an informal conference. Altruism was the theme of Mr. Landreth's address. He pointed out that while self-preservation is the first fundamental of life, the world must recognize another fundamental, that of helping others. The conference sessions were held only in the morning, the teachers attending the football games this afternoon.

To Attend Convention.
Harry L. Kuok expects to leave Pendleton Tuesday night for Kansas City where he will attend the national convention of the American Legion as one of Oregon's fifteen delegates. Mr. Kuok was elected to this coveted position last summer at the state convention in Eugene. Other eastern Oregon men who will attend the big session October 21, November 1 and 2, are Frances V. Galloway of The Dalles and Earl Blackaby of Ontario. All three eastern Oregon delegates are graduates of the University of Oregon and well known to many Pendleton people.

Are Raising Hogs
With the lowering of the price of wheat, hog raising is returning to favor with Umatilla county wheat growers, says Fred Bennion, county agent. Formerly growers built hog-tight fences but with the coming of a high price for hogs many farmers stopped raising even enough hogs for their own use. Mr. Bennion was in Athena yesterday and says that A. L. Swagart and James Duncan, swine breeders report an active demand for breeding stock. L. L. Rogers who farms near Adams, has purchased a pure bred bear sired by the grand champion boar at the State Fair. Jim Sturgis has bought 10 sows and a boar from George Strohm, who won first prize at the State Fair. Mr. Swagart, and Watts & Hunsel, will sell a carload of fat Poland Chinas in the market.

VISIT BARES RUMOR OF POLITICAL COUP

PORTLAND, Oct. 22.—Roy W. Rittner, president of the state senate, was a Portland visitor for a few hours Friday. He drove from his home in Pendleton a little while ago to Vancouver, B. C., where he tarried a while and reached Portland on the first leg of his journey home. He planned to drive to the Columbia Gorge hotel this evening, stay there overnight and get into Pendleton Saturday.

He is not talking politics, contending that there is no such animal just at this time. He admits, however, that he has been told the rumor that some federal job of high degree is in the offering for Governor Olcott, and he naively adds that he "hopes Ben takes it."

Rittner, by virtue of the recent constitutional amendment, would become governor in the event of Olcott's resignation, he being the president of the state senate. Some politicians contend that Louis E. Bean, speaker of the house, would like to be governor but does not want to go up against the Olcott defense. Accordingly, so gossip has it, a scheme has been mapped out by him or his friends, by which President Rittner would retire to private life in the event Olcott should resign, which would move Bean up into the governor's chair by reason of his position as speaker of the house. If that should come to pass he would gather his official family about him and hop right into a campaign to continue his place in the gubernatorial chair.

There are those, however, who grin a little at the story and offer to bet that if Rittner once got his feet under the big desk in the state capitol he would forget to resign, and might even take a whirl at the governorship himself.
