FORMAL HONOR BESTOWED UPON UNKNOWN DEAD

Nation's Officials Headed by President Harding Follow Casket to Grave.

THUNDEROUS CHEERING GREETED WOODROW WILSON

American War President in Horse Drawn Vehicle in Notable Procession.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(U. P.)—A solemn funeral cortege bore America's unknown soldier to his last resting place. The president of the United States, his cabinet, the supreme court, governors of states, both houses of congress, and soldiers from all ranks walked silently behind the casket on which the body lay. Near the end of the procession, greeted with thunderous cheers all along the way, was Woodrow Wilson, America's war president. With Mrs. Wilson in the only horse drawn vehicle allowed in the parade.

General Bandholtz led the procession, followed by his staff. Mounted artillery followed, each horse perfectly matched, a dappled gray. Then came a squadron of coal black horses, then brown ones, each with a white face. Then followed the caisson surrounded with war's heroes, Sergeant Woodfill, Sergeants Radza and Delaney, and famous generals and admirals. Simple carnations and white and red roses covered the caisson. Drawn by six coal black horses, whose riders sat them motionless, the caisson passed, the huge crowd standing silently. President Harding followed the caisson, with General Pershing beside him. Admirals and aides strung along behind. Then came Chief Justice Taft, striding briskly like the Vice President's Coolidge. Then came the supreme court, followed by the cabinet, distinguished state governors, the United States senate, marching eight abreast. Then the house of representatives, with heroes and distinguished men sandwiched in between.

A little "League of Nations of the Press" is assembled in Washington, with the hundred odd foreign correspondents mixing with the 200 or more American newspaper men—strange brown-skinned and yellow-skinned scribbles from Asia, the Balkan style of European war correspondents, all affably learning from and teaching their American reporter colleagues.

NAMELESS MARTYR BURIED WITH IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY IN ARLINGTON CEMETERY

Hero Laid to Rest While Statesmen and Soldiers of World Powers Pay Solemn Tribute.

By A. L. BRADFORD, (United Press Staff Correspondent) WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(That this may not be again.) In this spirit America and in a sense the World kneel today to pay homage to some unknown, unclaimed human body salvaged from the soil of outraged France, a mute victim of the sacrifices which saved civilization. As if to rededicate the cause for which the Stars and Stripes were streaked with blood and millions of brave men laid down their lives, this Republic and its comrades in arms swung forth today and proudly lavished honors, never dreamed of by any potentate, on this unknown dead soldier.

FIGHTING PARSON GIVES ARMISTICE DAY ADDRESS

Impressive Services at Rivoli Theatre Opened With Chorus of 200 Boys and Girls Voices

ALGER FEE INTRODUCES SPEAKER OF THE DAY

Dr. Holmes Congratulated Pendleton on its Patriotic Spirit and Interested Audience.

A new age, holding more possibilities of interest and service in the coming 10 years than has filled the past half century has been ushered in during the past few years, Dr. O. H. Holmes declared today in an eloquent address delivered before a packed house in the Rivoli theatre.

The foundation of the state is not armies, or navies, or business, it is men and women, and that is why we have room for only 100 per cent Americans.

Dr. Holmes was introduced by Alger Fee in a few words, contrasted the spirit of 1921, and 1817. In acknowledging his introduction Dr. Holmes congratulated Pendleton on its patriotic spirit, on its large crowd in attendance and the new theater which he characterized as worthy of a city as Pendleton's size.

PRESIDENT HARDING IN TRIBUTE TO DEAD PRAYS FOR PEACE ERA

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Nov. 11.—(U. P.)—President Harding's address at the ceremonies in honor of the unknown soldier here today follows in full:

We are met today to pay the impersonal tribute. The name of him whose body lies before us took flight with his imperishable soul. We know not whence he came, but only that his death marks him with the everlasting glory of an American dying for his country.

It might have come from any one of millions of American homes. Some mother gave him in her love and tenderness, and with him her most cherished hopes. Hundreds of mothers are wondering today, finding a touch of solace in the possibility that the nation bows in grief over the body of one she bore to live and die, if need be, for the republic. If we give rein to fancy, a score of sympathetic chords are touched, for in this body there once glowed the soul of an American, with the aspirations and ambitions of a citizen who cherished life and its opportunities. He may have been a native or an adopted son; that matters little, because they glorified the same loyalty, they sacrificed alike.

We do not know his station in life, because from every station came the patriotic response of the five millions. I recall the days of creating armies and the departing of caravels which braved the murderous seas to reach the battle lines for maintained nationality and preserved civilization. The service flag marked mansion and cottage alike, the riches were common to all homes in the consciousness of service to our country.

We do not know the eminence of his birth, but we do know the glory of his death. He died for his country and his greater devotion bath no man than this. He died uncomplaining, uncomplaining, with faith in his heart and hope on his lips, that his country should triumph and its civilization survive. As a typical soldier of this representative democracy, he fought and died believing in the indisputable justice of his country's cause. Conscious of the world's upheaval, appraising the magnitude of a war the like of which had never horrified humanity before, perhaps he believed his to be a service destined to change the tide of human affairs.

In the death gloom of gas, the bursting of shells and rain of bullets, men face more intimately the great God over all, their souls are aflame, and consciousness expands and hearts are searched. With the din of battle, the glow of conflict and the supreme trial of courage come involuntarily the hurried appraisal of life and the contemplation of death's great mystery. On the threshold of eternity, wondered how his ebullient blood would color the stream of human life, flowing on after his sacrifice. His patriotism was none less if he craved more than triumph of country; rather, it was greater if he hoped for a victory of all human kind. Indeed, I reverse that citizen whose confidence in the righteousness of his country inspired belief that its triumph is the victory of humanity.

This American soldier went forth to battle with no hatred for any people in the world, but hating war and hating the purpose of every war for conquest. He cherished our national rights and abhorred the threat of armed domination; and in the maelstrom of destruction and suffering and death he fired his shot for liberation of the captive conscience of the world.

Trained seals are at the Washington conference also. This "animal" is a high-priced newspaper correspondent, who interprets the news or honest hard-working reporter writers.

EX-SERVICE MEN MARCH IN LOCAL PARADE TODAY

Nation's Defenders, Some in Army Olive Drab and Some in Navy Blue Are in March.

'GREATEST MOTHER IN WORLD' RECEIVES HONOR

Bearing in Her Arms Body of American Soldier She Made Mute Appeal for Roll Call.

Pendleton's fighting men some of them in the olive drab of the Army, some of them in the blue of the Navy or Marines others in the garb of the civil life but all of them from among the ranks of the nation's defenders, marched today in the American Legion Armistice Day parade.

Their footsteps seemed to echo those which tread the war-swept fields of France and the decks of battleships in the troubled days of 1917-1918. With these men who knew the peril of the Argonne fight, and who faced the danger of the submarine marched Pendleton men who were with Gen. Wheat on at the Battle of Malabon in the days of the Spanish American War, and behind them rode G. A. R. men whose marching days are over but who walked with steady tread during the Civil War.

The brilliant sunshine of November made a fitting setting for the parade as it passed in review before the crowds which lined the streets. America's youth was represented in the vanguard, for four Boy Scouts, in uniform preceded Joe Grande, who in sailor or garb, was color bearer. With him were Charles Schall and Bill Harding.

The "Greatest Mother in the World," in the snowing basket of the Red Cross and bearing in her arms the body of an American soldier, rode on the Red Cross float. She made a mute appeal for response to the annual Roll Call, which opens today.

Mrs. Lane in Car. Mrs. Mary Lane, who well recalls the days when the Union was threatened, and who remembers also the assassination of Lincoln, rode in the decorated car which represented the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was the first regent of Umatilla chapter.

The army, navy and Marines were represented in the Legion float by Bud Cornfield, who served in the army, Tom Keating and Harry Owen, ex-navy men, and Tom Searey, ex-Marine who was severely wounded while fighting overseas.

Salvation Army Represented. Not even an auto accident which occurred just before the parade, and in which two Salvation Army workers were injured could dampen the spirit of the local post, which was represented by a float. Somewhat battered and torn, and showing the wreck of table and chairs which were to have been used in a tableau depicting the making of doughnuts, the float joined the procession and received its share of applause.

Martial music from the Pendleton band and the Boys Band heralded the approach of the veterans. Military marches and other airs were a feature.

X-CLUB COMMITTEE WILL SUPPORT SEPTIC TANK MEASURE FOLLOWING AGREEMENT BY COUNCIL. NOT TO BUY RICHARDSON LAND

Differences of opinion which the X Club and the city council were supposed to hold regarding the expenditure of money for the construction of a septic tank in the west end of the city were practically proved to be non-existent last night when a committee of five from the club and members of the city council and some members of the city planning commission met in an informal session at the council chambers.

As a result of the meeting, complete harmony between the two groups promises to be restored and with a fuller understanding of the plans entertained by each side, it is anticipated both by the X Club committee and by the city council that the program of improvement in its main features will have the undivided support of both groups.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor G. A. Hartman who told of the trip of inspection to the tract of ground in the west end of the city yesterday morning which was made by the committee of five from the X Club and a number of councilmen. As a result of this trip, he said, the members of the club had declared that they would support the requests of the council if certain changes were made, as necessary, he said.

Dr. E. U. Temple, as chairman of the X Club committee, then explained that his committee felt that they could support the council if the council would pledge itself either by a special ordinance or by a resolution not to purchase the Richardson tract in addition to the Doherty tract as a site for the septic tank. Another provision was that none of the special bond issue of $25,000 for the purchase and improvement of park sites should be used for improving the septic tank ground for park purposes, and also, that no part of the issue of $125,000 should be used to improve the land in the west end of the city for park purposes.

Mayor Hartman, in discussing the proposal of the committee, declared that it has never been the intention of the council as a body to make a park out of the ground to be bought as a site for the tank in the west end. He also said that the council hoped to keep the cost of construction down to $90,000 or $100,000, but that the extra sum was requested so that in the event the bids for the plant are higher than the estimates, the work may still be completed without asking for a second issue, which might otherwise be necessary, he said.
