FRENCH NOW BUILDING METALLIC AEROPLANES

PARIS, Nov. 12.—(L. N. S.)—French aeroplane constructors—justly alarmed at the number of accidents, one of them causing the death of one of the country's finest airmen, Bernard de Romanet, due to the wing canvas having torn in mid-air—are now turning their attention to the building of metallic machines. Models of metallic machines have been imported into France from America and England, and till now but little confidence had been placed in such machines.

It took three such accidents as mentioned above, in the space of three days before constructors were convinced that fast-travelling machines cannot be at the mercy of the slightest tear in the canvas covering the wings. These accidents occurred during the trials and during the race itself for the Coupe Deutsch de la Meurthe, founded as a successor to the Gordon Bennett cup, which was won and retained permanently last year by France.

New and formidably fast machines had been built for this year's race, and the two best pilots in the country—Romanet and Sadi Lecointe, last year's winner of the Bennett cup—had been engaged to fly the machines. Romanet during a trial was flying at a speed of 240 kilometers an hour when the canvas on his wings tore, and not being high enough to control the machine, he plunged headlong to earth. He was taken out of the machine unrecognizable.

Sadi Lecointe, during the race proper, and travelling at even a greater speed than Romanet, saw his propeller smash and parts of it rip up his canvas. He, however, was able to land and escaped miraculously.

WHITMAN WINS VICTORY AGAINST WILLAMETTE

WHITMAN COLLEGE, Walls Walla, Wn., Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—In a game featured by much punting by both sides and a powerful Whitman offensive in the third quarter, the Whitman college football team defeated Willamette university, 25 to 0, here yesterday. The missionaries made four touchdowns, but failed to convert three owing to a stiff cross field wind. The first half closed 7-0, with Whitman having a slight edge on the visitors and scoring when Tilton bucked the ball over in the first six minutes of play in the second quarter, following a series of successive first downs.

An 85-yard run for a touchdown by Roe, Whitman quarterback, made after he had received Willamette's kickoff, fumbled and recovered, opened a smashing Whitman offensive in the third quarter. Two more touchdowns were added in this period when Tilton and Shepherd crossed the line first on a criss-cross and then on a tackle play. In the first of the fourth period Whitman worked the ball to the one-yard line, where with one down to go Willamette held. Willamette also crossed the goal line in this quarter, but her runner stopped out of bounds. The visitors were unable to gain at all, making but one first down to 17 for Whitman.

WHITE MARBLE HOME OF D. A. R.'S IS MEETING PLACE OF CONFERENCE

Building is Dedicated to Patriots Who Achieved American Independence in Years Gone

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—Memorial Continental Hall, the white marble home of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, where the general sessions of the Arms conference will be held is dedicated to the patriots who achieved American independence. It is situated west of the President's Park, on 17th street on the site of a residence of James Madison.

Designed by Edward Pearce Casey of New York, the erection of the structure was undertaken by the Daughters in April 1904 at a cost of $700,000. It is built of Vermont marble and in design and general appearance resembles the classical buildings erected during the American Revolutionary period. It is a fit fellow of its neighboring structures the Pan-American and Red Cross buildings. The front portico, the outer columns of which are adjacent to the sidewalk on 17th street, provides for a carriage drive and leaves the visitor at the entrance steps, where three bronze memorial doors give access into the reception hall.

Within the entire building the note of the Continental period is carried out with colonial decorations and furniture, and many excellent "pieces" of mahogany bring forth thoughts of the cherished heirlooms in grandfathers' house. Many of the rooms and portions of the building are the gifts of or were furnished by individual chapters of the national society.

For example, the spacious entrance hall is the gift of the Pennsylvania chapter. In niches forming the frieze, are marble statues of Revolutionary heroes from several states. A north and south staircase, both memorial gifts, lead above to the galleries and committee rooms.

Opening directly from the vestibule is the auditorium, which with its three galleries, has a seating capacity of two thousand people. For the Arms conference, however, the seats on the ground floor have been removed and the floor raised to the level of the platform on the west side of the hall. Here will be set up the "U" shaped council table, measuring over 100 feet around the three sides, where the delegates to the conference will sit. Visitors and representatives of the press will be seated in the gallery.

The auditorium is a beautiful inspiring room with cream-tinted walls, decorated with the garlands of fruits and foliage, and fitted with mahogany furnishings. High above is a roof of ground-glass, divided into ornamented squares. Each state of the union is represented by a flag hanging from the cornice. Set into the east gallery railing is an illuminated clock bearing the arms of Maryland and the insignia of the society.

In the galleries to the North and South hang oil paintings of Washington at Dorchester Heights by Darius Cobb, and Martha Washington, by Prof. E. F. Andrews, both gifts to the society. On either side of the stage-like platform two boxes are raised slightly above the level of the floor and set within the proscenium arch, affording an excellent view of the proceedings on floor.

Other finely furnished rooms on the first floor serve as offices for the national officers, a library and a museum where are exhibited treasures of great historic value, among them John Hancock's desk.

On the south side of the building overlooking the Pan American grounds, projects a semi-circular portico, the roof of which is supported by thirteen monolithic marble columns presented by the thirteen original states.

On the second floor are the offices of president general, and a reception room furnished with chairs and desks of the colonial period and historical oil paintings. A spacious room is reserved for the meetings of the national board; it is known as the "Cabinet room." Among the furnishings are thirteen carved chairs bearing in their back-locks the coats of arms of the thirteen original states. The window draperies are of blue satin embroidered in gold, and the lace curtains are woven in a star and stripe design.

Other offices and rooms on the second floor include the recording and corresponding secretaries rooms. The Massachusetts room furnished like an old colonial parlor with authentic furniture, the California and Michigan rooms and the committee room furnished by the Daughters of the State of New Jersey, paneled and furnished in wood from the old British Frigate Augusta. This room and the national board room are available as committee rooms for the Arms delegates.

On the third floor there is a private dining room prepared by Virginia, several small committee rooms and a banquet hall combining in its decorative design the colors of the society. The blending of blue and white on the wall and ceiling decorations is emphasized by the darker blue haircloth on the mahogany chairs and sofa. Suitable serving rooms and a large kitchen adjoining the banquet hall and make for efficient service in the event of a formal dinner.
