ALL IN THE GAME

So you've scraped your shin and you've bumped your knee, And you're just as sore as a boy can be, And they roughed you there when you tripped and fell; But all of the hurts, will, soon get well, So don't fret over bumps you've had, For they are all in the game, my lad.

They were stronger than you? Well, I guess that's true, For your little body is black and blue, And they tackled hard when you had the ball, And your shoulder hurts where you chanced to fall, And some of them cheated—well, that's too bad, But that is all in the game, my lad.

And you lost the game, but your dad won't care

ARTICLE TWO AND ARTICLE 10

THE outstanding fact about the new quadruple alliance or union is that under this pact the United States will assume, with reference to the Pacific, virtually the same obligation it would have assumed under Article 10 of the League of Nations, had this country joined the league.

Article 2 of the quadruple union treaty says:

"If the said rights are threatened by the aggressive action of any other power, the high contracting parties shall communicate with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly or separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation."

Article 10 of the League of Nations covenant is as follows:

"The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

A further study of the league covenant and the quadruple treaty will show that in many respects the United States would be more favorably situated if in the league rather than in the Pacific union. The league covenant prescribes that actions by the league council must be by unanimous vote, therefore this country if a member could stop any action to which it might be opposed. The Pacific union treaty says nothing about the unanimous consent of the member nations. Therefore it may be assumed that in case of a dispute in the Pacific we would have to accept the verdict of the other nations whether we liked it or not. In this connection it is also well to remember that the interests of England and Japan in the orient are somewhat in common and they might reasonably be expected to act together. Nor can we lose sight of the fact that under the Hughes armament proposal the navies of England and Japan combined would have the mastery of the ocean. A member of the League of Nations has the privilege of withdrawing on two years' notice. There is no withdrawal provision in the Pacific union until after the expiration of 10 years. The League of Nations covenant requires no nation to scrap any battleships until after the league has proven its efficiency in preserving peace. Even then such action would have to be by unanimous vote of the league council. Under the Pacific deal we are to demolish our best battleships, now under construction and on which over $300,000,000 has already been spent. We are to do this without first actually learning from experience whether the Hughes-Lodge idea is a workable affair. The Pacific union treaty protects the isle of Japan against invasion; no such safeguard is offered the United States.

In view of all these things it is hard to see how we have gained anything by scrapping the league covenant, as far as we are concerned, only to join the Pacific union. The great praiseworthy point about the Pacific union treaty is that it does frankly recognize the principle of article 10 that if the nations wish peace and armament reductions they must accept the responsibility of maintaining peace. On this account the pro league members of the senate, both republicans and democrats, will probably vote to ratify the new treaty though recognizing it as inferior to the league covenant.

As to the politics involved, is not the action of Lodge in submitting the new treaty with article 2 included a tacit admission that the senate fight against article 10 the basis of the whole fight against the league) was founded on partisan politics and not on principle? If this is the case, and the facts seem plain, then the senate played horse while the peace of the world was at stake and by so doing added greatly to international turmoil that has disrupted trade and created a depression that has been very severe, in this country and elsewhere.

In the Sunday Oregonian yesterday appeared a full page alleged map showing the location of the Wallula cutoff. By clever work of the artist, Spokane was pictured as northwest of Pendleton and hence the work of art would make the unsophisticated citizen believe that those who travel from Spokane to Portland via Walla Walla and Pendleton have to make a loop around the moon. It is on just such unmitigated misrepresentation as this that the arguments for the Wallula road are chiefly built.

If we are to be civilized we must pay for it and experience has proven that civilization pays. The heathen is not very successful, regardless of the crooked stick he uses for a plow and regardless of the fact he has no roads and but one shirt or none

AM DIFFERENT NOW, SAYS MRS MARVIN

Portland Woman Like New Person Since Overcoming Trouble.

"Taniae has toned up my stomach so that everything agrees with me now," said Mrs. Ida Marvin, 1733 Portsmouth Ave., Portland, Ore.

"Nobody knows what a relief it is to be rid of the fear of indigestion. It used to be that every time I ate anything I suffered for hours afterwards. My whole system finally gave way and I was so nervous I got little rest day or night. "Since taking Taniae I am like a different person. I have a splendid appetite now, my digestion is just perfect and I get eight hours sound, refreshing sleep every night."

Nature intended that you should eat what you want. You can do it if you take Taniae. Taniae is sold in Pendleton by Thompsons Drug Store and by leading druggists.

REVIVAL OF OLD-TIME FASHIONS MAY BRING BACK ROMANTIC ERA

Creatures Who Fainted as Easily and as Gracefully as They Flirted May Return.

BY MARGERY REX (Written for International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Will our new romantic styles in clothes bring back an era of romance?

Will the revival of hoopskirts, lace scarves, tiny fans and garlanded coiffures cause to live again the delicate creatures who fainted as easily and as gracefully as they flirted? And do their garments really affect the characters of women?

Sudden changes in demeanor are seen in the drab little girl who suddenly gets a new dress. She is transformed. So is the middle-aged hither-to unexcited for woman whose husband may unexpectedly gain wealth. Her new raiment makes a new woman out of her oftentimes.

Miss Ethel Traphagen, expert on dress design, confirms the legend that clothes make the man or woman. At her studio on Poplar street, Brooklyn, she displayed a number of drawings of styles of the past and told me some of her own theories on dress.

Miss Traphagen's Conclusions "Undoubtedly wearing clothes harking back to times of romance will make women take on the characteristics of those 'periods,'" Miss Traphagen says.

"Of course, you know one of my beliefs is that we go through one incarnation after another, and that when we long for the trappings of some one era we are going back to those days through which we passed and which we loved.

"In a certain mood a woman puts on a garment to express that feeling. Again, when she puts on the dress of a bygone century she assumes thereby the qualities of vagaries of the time.

"In the different stages of development in our lives we are subject to different moods in which we revert to former experiences. If a woman puts on a Moyen Age costume she is apt to feel as the woman of those Middle Ages did.

"The fact of women taking to the bouffant skirts and rosebud garlanded coiffures shows a positive leaning back to the days of romance. In the thirties and in the sixties there was a romantic spirit, but there was also hypocrisy. Those ermine girls looked very sweet and demure, but they were not always so ingenious as we think them.

Spooing and Swooning Customs "Even when these styles are brought out now there is always a little flippancy added to them."

But where, oh where, in our highly conditioned conditions of life, is there room for the dear creatures to wear their hoops and succumb to the "vapours" at the slightest provocation? At least girls who swoon easily might be preferable to those ultra-moderns some of our readers score so savagely, those whose only "vapours" are the thin streams of cloud that arise from the amber cigarette insulators.

"In Victoria's reign," Miss Traphagen continued, "she was so repressed that everybody became bottled up. The styles immediately showed this. The squeezed-in waists, the ridiculous stuffed leg-of-mutton sleeves tell of the influence of this strict ruler.

"But in America we have a conglomeration of races. Each brings a different environment and a past. The centuries from which they come have each had a different history of fashion affected in so many ways in the past. No one silhouette of style predominates today.

"Clothes influence women greatly. The simplest dress imparts youth and freshness. It speaks of childhood and bread and butter days. Brocade makes us feel regal; velvet, dignified and a little softened.

"She who dons taffets becomes crisp and jaunty like the fabric. Blue serge is business like and suitable and lends self-confidence.

"The rolled-down stockings and all too short skirts we have had for some time give a woman vulgarity. Or, rather, they bring out her innate vulgarity, for the fact that she wears them shows the quality to be in her. "Colors have a greater power over those who can understand it, but blue cannot say what yellow says. Neither can red nor violet. Blue is cold and formal, but very satisfactory. Green is cool and restful, while yellow is cheerful and brilliant and creates harmony about it. Red is worn and aggressive, orange rather hot, but still very decorative; violet is mystic, mournful and darkening. "Light colors give youth, gaiety and femininity to women, while the dark shades offer dignity and repose. Neutralized colors have great charm and subtlety." What man wouldn't want to protect a dainty thing in shell pink or baby blue, and who cares what happens to a navy blue serge girl? Little satin toes peeping from beneath a lacy skirt are more tantalizing than plain sight of two little knees that knock. Preserving old letters in lemon verbeine may become a more popular indoor sport than preserving ones own sweet self in apricot brandy. But the romantic girl had lily white hands and wore flowers at her throat. This last feat is one mystery we would like explained. The practice of lilacs-of-the-valley or violets way up near ones larynx is inexplicable.
