This is done by having a second film on the same spindle as the moving picture film, on which are photographed various curves and openings correspond-ing to the words which are to accompany the pictures. A light sent through this film falls upon a selenium cell. The selenium cell depends upon a discovery made many years ago that the metal scientum changes its electric resistance when light fails upon it. It is thus possible get variations in an electric current by letting the beam of light from a speech photograph film fall upon such a cell. These variations act in a telephone to produce speech.

The selenium cell is much inferior to Dr. Kunz's photo-electric cell in transforming light waves into electric pulses. The photo-electric cell is not only much more sensitive, but it has no lag; that it, is responds immediate-ly to a light wave after bours and days of use. The selenium cell is not only not as sensitive, but it has the disadvantage of having this lag, or fa-

"Dr. Kung has been working for several years on the effect of light on certain of the alikali metals, such as potassium and sodium," said the head of the department. "A layer of any one of these metals when in a vacuum or certain low pressure cases gives off negative electricity; that is a current of electricity can be produced by letting a beam of light fall upon a film of Potassium which is properly pre-pared inside of an exhausted glass bulb.
