NEW APPARATUS STERILIZES SURGICAL GUT BY PRESSURE

Experiments at Government Station Indicate Commercial Possibilities of Discovery.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 7. (I. N. S.)—Sterilization of surgical gut by high pressure is proposed by scientists now as a means of making commercial use of the possibilities seen in pressure experiments conducted at the State Department station here by the late Dr. B. H. Hite, Dr. N. J. Giddings and others.

Dr. Hite was able to secure the almost unbelievable pressure of 300,000 pounds to the square inch, and this pressure was found to give perfect sterilization, without breaking down the structure, as heat and similar sterilizing methods have done.

In efforts to pass on this boon to mankind Dr. Hite tested the pasteurization of milk, the preserving of fruit and vegetables, so that they retained their flavor as in no other way; the sterilization of soil for investigational purposes. The results were surprisingly successful, but the fact remained that the size of the apparatus used would not permit any of this work on a scale that admitted of any commercial value at least until much larger apparatus could be constructed.

It remained for someone to find some work of sterilization which should be limited in extent, but representing more than usual cash value before the experiment could have much commercial interest.

When Dr. Hite started experiments in high pressure, in 1895, he found no apparatus available of any sort along such lines. He drew his own plans for a cylinder for pressure work but when he presented them to a manufacturing company one of the members refused to do the work because, they contended, the project was worthless. At length Dr. Hite had a cylinder made which withstood 80,000 pounds pressure before the cylinder, along with the piston, went to pieces. Convinced that he was on the right track, he continued his experiments and sought stronger apparatus.

The next cylinder that was made for him stood 200,000 pounds pressure to the square inch. By securing aid from the War Department Dr. Hite at last had a cylinder made from a naval rifle that tested out 300,000 pounds to the inch. This cylinder, while not sufficiently large to admit of using any large amounts of material, has given perfect sterilization results in the numerous experimental tests made with it.

AMERICAN WOMEN REJECT FRENCH

DICTIONATION OF LENGTH OF SKIRTS

BY HEDDA HOYT.

(Written for the United Press.) NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—American women have definitely rejected French dictation on the length of their skirts.

Months ago Paris modistes declared that the long skirt was to be the coming vogue for women. American designers were ready to agree with them. In fact they will tell you now that the longer hem is here. Perhaps—but where?

Not on Fifth Avenue; not on Broadway; not on Hester street; nor Main street. Gopher Prairie!

At the first announcement from Paris of the long skirt, magazines of fashion were filled with illustrations of long skirted mannequins; display windows immediately ignored the tapering calves of waxed models; cloth makers sat back in swivel chairs and chuckled at the thought. And what happened?

The flapper still flaps about in knee length skirt and hose of gauze, clinging to them because she knows in summing up her charms that legs are not least. The athletic girl in flat heels and woolen hose strides around in the freedom of her short, flaring skirt. And the matron whose years recall the germ-laden hems of yesterday awaits for someone with a less shapely ankle to hasten the style. In these days when a long skirt might suggest a physical defect, it is a brave woman who will attempt it.

Heretofore Paris has been a bright and shining symbol of style and chic. When Paris designers said short yamps, short hair, short corsets and short skirts we wasted no time in "outshooting" them. But when they start lengthening, in the vanguard of the dough boy, we are not so "foot sweet."

White gloves are being supplanted by taupe and gray and even darker shades for dress wear.

The popular side panel effect for skirts can be used to utmost advantage on afternoon and evening gowns by hanging long strings of jet or pearls from the side waist line to the hem of the gown.

Winter finds the ever popular coat suit a trifle longer in coat length than the past few seasons. "Marion," or chestnut brown, seems to be the prevailing shade for suits and lends itself admirably to fur trimmings such as sable and kolinsky. The latest shade used for undergarments comes from Paris and is called rose-beige. It has more of a flesh tone than what formerly we termed "flesh" as the introduction of tan might suggest.

PERFUMES AT ANY PRICE

MOSCOW, Jan. 7.—(A. P.)—Perfumes at any price is the demand of the women folk of Russia's speculators. French perfumes that sold here a few weeks ago, when the stores first opened, at 600,000 to 700,000 rubles ($6 to $7) for a tiny flask, are now quoted retail at twice that figure, and the price is soaring as the speculators in stolen sugar, in furs, in boots and shoes, make more money.

There is a perfume market, just as there is a grain or leather market, and there is a set of speculators who prey on the speculators who get rich in other lines. They have put out agents who are racing to the cheaper markets for perfumes, such as Baku, Batum and Odessa on the Black Sea.
