JAPANESE FARMERS BEGIN TO ORGANIZE

BY CLARENCE DUBOSE
 (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

TOKYO (By Mail)—Japanese farmers are just commencing to feel their oats. That is to say, they're showing the first signs of the organization and group action movement that may ultimately lead to something approaching the farmers' organizations of America. A community of tenant farmers near Tokyo struck for lower rent a few days ago. They simply walked out of the fields in the midst of the rice harvest and told the landlords the crops could go hang unless rents came down. The 600 farmers are still out, and the rice from something more than 1,000 acres they cultivated is lost.

The movement caused a great deal of interest throughout Japan and is regarded as distinctly significant in relation to the increasing strike spirit and growing tendencies toward organization among industrial workers in towns and cities.

The industrial labor movement is new in Japan. The so-called Samuel Gompers of Japan is under arrest on a charge of unlawfully inciting strikers. The labor agitators path here is a perilous one. This is particularly true since Premier Hara's assassination, because immediately every person suspected of identity with any mass-movement became classified

Two Against One Is Fair

Johnnie Dundee didn't complain about meeting two men at once when he met the Singer Midgets, in New York. One of them wouldn't have been tall enough to hit him a fair blow.

Berlin Plays on the Ice

Many new ideas in ice yacht racing were evolved at the opening of the season at Potsdam, Germany. The above is a race staged by the Potsdam Yacht Club. The skating yacht is one of the most popular of sports in Germany.

with dangerous agitators in the minds of the police.

However, new as the puny labor movement here is the "farmers' movement" is still newer. The feeling among observers is that it will develop and play a vital part in the increasing social movement now manifesting itself in Japan.

Newspapers, politicians and government leaders are giving thought as never before, to the problems forced upon them by the farmers and industrial workers. The most important step is the preparation, by the government, of a tenant-farmer reform bill to be introduced in the Diet. This bill is the result of a year's investigation of conditions by a government commission, and is the first step of this kind ever taken in Japan. Comment everywhere is upon the significance of the fact that for the first time in history Japanese farmers are acting with a spirit of class consciousness.
