TOTAL ECLIPSE OF SUN SEEN FROM S. SEA ISLE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(U. P.)—Christmas Island, in the Indian Ocean, one of the several bits of land that lonely voyagers have come upon in the holiday season and have named accordingly, may play an important part in the further checking up of the Einstein theory, according to reports from London.
 The Royal Observatory at Greenwich is planning to send to the tiny island shortly after the first of the year an expedition equipped with good-sized telescopes to observe next September's total eclipse of the sun. A Dutch astronomical party may also install its instruments there.
 "Christmas Island has been described by travelers as at once one of the loneliest and loveliest spots in the world. And its possession of tree-climbing crabs and a superheated tree gives it a right to be classed as one of the queerest.
 Java, its nearest neighbor to the north, is 250 miles away, the little So-co Islands lie more than 600 miles to the west, Australia is 1000 miles to the southeastward while to the south the waters of the Oregon ocean are unbroken by even the smallest islands until the lands around the South Pole are reached at a distance of nearly 4000 miles. The island, twelve miles long by nine broad, is in reality made up of the slopes and top of a huge mountain peak.
 The island is believed to be unique in that it is probably the only tropical island capable of sustaining a considerable population which had never been peopled until after its discovery by Europeans. Coconuts and sago palms as well as many other tropical trees grow in profusion.

"Noisy" Football for the Blind

Blind workers at a Liverpool basket factory play football during their dinner hour. The ball is equipped with tin discs which make a noise by which the blind follow the course of the ball.

 But one peculiar creature is common—present—a wicker looking red crab. Some of these creatures attain a size of nine inches across the back. They do not confine themselves to the shore but range all over the island, and always in groups. They even climb the trees and feast on the nipa palms. As an offset to the crabs the island is mosquitoless.
 For one of its features Christmas Island may be said to be infamous rather than famous. It is a tree which is described by one disgraced visitor to the island as emitting "the most disagreeable odor in the world." With a trunk as sturdy as an oak and leaves as graceful as those of an aspen, it gives to the eye no indication of its true character. But its scent permeates the air for hundreds of feet in every direction; and if one is unfortunate enough to do so much as touch its bark or leaves, nothing short of repeated scrubbing with strong carbolic soap will make him again fit for human society.

Simple Negligee

The newest thing in a negligee, for the figure youthful enough to take it, is a straight garment which is just a width of silken material with an opening clipped in for the neck and two slits for the arms.
