Just Folks by Edgar A. Guest

GOT UP EARLY YESTERDAY

Got up early yesterday,
Long before the rich were out,
Or the working were about,
Or the children up to play,
Went into the garden where
I could only stand and stare,
Dugled by the beauty which
Made the tiniest blossom rich.

Still the dew was hanging low,
Brighter than the rarest gems
In a lady's diadem,
Every grass blade was aglow
With the jewels of the dawn,
And I looked upon my lawn
And my flower beds and trees
In amazement, if you please.

(Copyright, 1922, by Edgar A. Guest.)

'Twas a slight too fair for words,
Here was beauty, fresh and new,
With the sun just breaking through
To the music of the birds,
And I thought of all the men
And the women sleeping then,
With their shades still tightly drawn
To the splendor of the dawn.

Some perhaps may live and die
And not know and never see
Just how fair the world can be
With the crimson in the sky
And the new days just begun,
But tomorrow with the sun
I shall rise again to share
Every lovely jewel there.

ON JUNE 26

THE meeting in Portland June 26 will be a milestone on the road to development of the Umatilla rapids project. In many respects this gathering will be the most important one yet held upon the subject. The facts relating to the project have not previously been officially presented in Portland. We have had considerable support for the movement there and it is believed further and very valuable aid can be secured when the story is laid before the Portland chamber. Hence the importance of the program two weeks from next Monday. It is vital to the success of the project that the whole hearted support of our metropolis be obtained. Without unity of effort it will be difficult to succeed. The project is not a local affair by any means. It is a scheme of interest to the whole northwest yet of particular importance to Portland because the territory to be developed is distinctly in the Portland trade zone. For this reason we may reasonably anticipate Portland support. Assurances already given indicate this aid will be forthcoming when the facts are formally presented. It is to be hoped that our desires along this line will be realized and it will certainly be worth while to make the strongest effort possible towards that end.

The Umatilla rapids project is in many respects the most logical and practical project under consideration in the entire west. It is a big enough enterprise to be worthy of a real effort yet the estimated cost of the project is such that it is within reason at this time. What we need is a vigorous organization be equipped to put the needed steam and punch behind the movement. If we can obtain this we will have a better chance of success than has the Columbia basin project or even the larger Colorado project. There are excellent reasons for thinking the project can be built and that many agencies will cooperate toward this goal.

The event immediately before us is the meeting with membership of the Portland chamber June 26.

WHY THE RAIL WORKER HAS A GRIEVANCE

THE slashes in pay of railroad workers made by the railway labor board would be more acceptable if the workers knew that prices were to come down in proportion to wages. The worker is primarily interested in the purchasing power of his daily wage. If prices drop wages by that very process are advanced. But if prices remain as they are or go higher then a wage reduction becomes a truly serious matter.

Since the war closed we have had considerable deflation and in many lines prices have come down. It is a process that should continue and would continue if we would but let nature take its course.

But congress is absorbed in the task of writing a high tariff bill with the expressed view of cutting off imports so as to bring about higher prices for commodities in this country. The eastern manufacturer will be the chief beneficiary of the tariff. Here and there a producer, such as the woolman will profit, but taken as a class the producer will not gain. The farmer is victimized, not benefited by a high tariff.

When the Fordney-McCumber bill is passed there will unquestionably be an increase in retail prices. The retailer and the wholesaler will face conditions under which they will be powerless. On all sorts of commodities in wearing apparel and other manufactured lines the new tariff rates are such that advances of from 25 to 100 per cent will occur. The mere prospect of a higher tariff wall has already stiffened prices and is preventing the restoration of normal conditions.

In view of what congress is striving to do the railroad workers are justified in objecting to wage cuts. How can they be expected to look calmly on pay reductions when the majority congress is devoting its chief energies to a bill to materially increase the cost of living?

John T. Keegan, handsome and eligible young bachelor of Butter creek, was in town Saturday, looking over the First National Bank as though he might have a notion of buying it. When asked how everything was John replied that "Lena is the best in the world," but we don't know whether he meant his postoffice or his girl.—Heppner Herald.

The wheat crop of Umatilla county is generally ruined several times each year before a bumper crop is harvested.

The Iowa primary election seems to have outdistanced both Indiana and Pennsylvania from the standpoint of progressiveness.

ALTOONA MAN DIGGING FOR BURIED TREASURE

ALTOONA, Pa., June 8.—Some years ago a gypsy woman told occupants of the property of F. R. Zook, in Martinsburg, Blair County, that there had been buried there a sum of money. She said if they would dig down they would find a stone wall and a brick wall. Later a man did start digging and found the stone wall and brick wall, but he quit the job before finding the money. AUGUSTA MAN ADMITS GUILT IN THEFT CASE

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 8.—The same old story—a trusted employee taking a flyer on the market, losing, and "borrowing" company funds to cover his losses—was revealed here when Leland C. Adams, former sales manager for the Seacoast Fertilizer Company of New York, pleaded guilty to embezzlement.

Adams told the court that his defalcation resulted from playing the market. His first shortage came when he borrowed $200 from a local bank to play the cotton market. He lost and took the company's money to meet the note, he said.

Adams never won a bet, he says. He always played the long side of the market and was wiped out each time.

Twelve months ago Adams confessed to a shortage of $10,801.34. After spending five months in jail, he was released on bond and went to Atlanta in an effort to arrange a settlement with the bonding company. He offered $500 in cash, a deed to a lot in Wilmington, N. C., and a note for $1,000 signed by leading business men. The company insisted on payment of $2,500 in cash.

Judge Hammond instructed Adams to resubmit his offer. Unless it is

Adams has a wife and two children who, he told the court, are entirely dependent on him for support.
