Brands of "Bulls" Vary, Louis Learns

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—Back in Spain Louis Creni was cheered for "throwing the bull." The more he tormented the bull the more popular he was with his police.

Recently Louis strolled down Broadway enrolling the "Toreador" song from "Carmen," proclaiming to the world his sterling worth as a matador and offering to take on any "bull" in the world for pastime.

Herman Hextrum, one of the oldest and biggest "bulls" of the San Francisco police force, have in sight. His blue uniform acted upon Louis as does the red flag of the bull.

He shouted his defiance of all "bulls," and to make it more emphatic implanted one of his toes in the "bull's" rather expansive stomach.

Instantly if not a little sooner the "bull's" nightstick beat a rat-tat on Louis's head, despite his voluble protests that such was not in accordance with the rules of the game in Sunny Seville.

Result—Louis landed in the bull pen at police court and, despite his plea, he meant no harm to the "beast," was sent to pasture for five days by a police judge who disapproved bull fighting.

Overturning Spoils Hay

Much good hay is spoiled each year by being left too long in the swath, windrow or shock. A very much better quality of spoiled hay or loose may be had by turning the hay out as rapidly as possible and putting it in the mow or stack where it is not exposed to light. It may then be baled up with better moisture content and better color and quality.

SMALL TOWN BANDS PRAISED BY DAVIS

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Secretary of Labor Davis, who played the clarinet in the town band in Sharon, Pa., many years ago, is advocating the creation of a Federal bureau of recreation for the development of instrumental and vocal music, the drama, the theatre and athletics throughout the United States.

"To my mind," the Labor Secretary said, "there is no greater influence for community and social good in the American small towns of today than the town band. Some of the pleasantest recollections of my life carry me back to the days when I played the clarinet in the Sharon band. President Harding preserves as one of his proudest recollections the memory of his association with the Marion, O., Band in the days when he was just beginning to develop the character for accomplishment which bore him to the white house."

Proposes Recreation Bureau
It is Secretary Davis's idea to have the proposed bureau of recreation co-operative with the States and the individual community music.

"As to music I would adapt the Eisteddfod idea of Wales to American," he said. "That means the organization nationally of instrumental and vocal music, the theatre and all other recreations. This national organization must begin in the individual community. I believe that all municipalities should have recreational leaders. I would have every form of recreation, so that the humblest citizen could really take part and enjoy it. I would have community competitions, from which the winners would go to county and State competitions and finally to a great national gathering."

Praiseth Power of Music

"The power of music," Secretary Davis added, "is the most universal of arts and has been recognized from the dawn of civilization. Down the long centuries from the dim ages to today humanity has marched or danced, plodded or gambled its way of progress under the inspiration of music. From the Psalms of David to the syncopation of modern jazz, music has always been the one art that entered intimately the lives of most of the world's peoples. Existence without music is a drab, drear thing for an individual or a people. There is no greater force for peace and happiness than music."

Davis believes that America could take no single step that would advance the nation along the road to happiness further than the establishment of a national means of exercising the power of music.

He said that America can be organized musically, because most American workmen receive a saving wage, pointing out that there are 40,000,000 people gainfully employed in this country.

"Music has not only meant much in the home life of every Welsh family, but has always been one of the greatest institutions of that nation," Mr. Davis, who was born in Wales, continued. "Long before the time of which we have actual record there were great associations for the furtherance of music in Wales. Among them the Gorsedd has lived down through to the present day and is one of the greatest influences in the national life. Under the auspices of the Gorsedd whole communities gather periodically for song."

"While with a touch of pride I like to think of my native country as a leader in music and song, we cannot claim that Wales is the only country that has had the benefit of great influence from music. Every country, every race, tribe and clan, civilized and uncivilized, has its music. As far back as any history which we have of the oldest civilization we find musical instruments which resemble greatly the modern instruments of today."

"The North American Indian was a very musical being. He had a song for every phase of his life, for every religious and social ceremony. He had a different rhythm or melody for the hunt, for war, in his games, his prayers and his courtships. Strange to say the Eskimo has put his music to a more noble purpose than even the modern civilization has today. I refer to what they term the 'nuit'-songs, which they sing in settling their disputes or controversies. The parties in controversy get together and sing at each other, with the public as umpire, and the man who first amuses the public to the extent of making it laugh is acclaimed the victor."

"This is not the mode in settling our industrial controversies, however. The parties in dispute certainly play before the public, but the words and language hurled by one at the other could hardly be classified as song and the object would seem to be to make the umpire wince."
