SEATTLE, July 18.—(U. P.)—Forest fires in this section were under control this morning. PROMINENT OFFICIALS CAUGHT IN BOOZE RING

CHICAGO, July 18.—(U. P.)—Internal revenue agents today sought an indictment for over 50 men, including millionaires, a member of congress and former federal officials, in connection with a two million dollar booze ring unearthed here. Graft flowed freely, according to the officers' charges. Sensational evidence of corruption of prohibition officials has been obtained, the agents said. Two prohibition officers are reported to have received on the payroll of certain breweries with salaries close to $100,000 yearly. Colonel A. C. Earnshaw, chief special revenue intelligence officer handling the investigation, reported it would be nearly three weeks before all evidence in the case can be presented to the federal grand jury.

Bashful and Rare

This clouded tiger, presented to the London Zoo by the Prince of Wales, is one of the rarest animals in the collection—and the most timid. He seldom comes out where the public can see him.

At the end of the play no one can tell who the culprit is. It is understood that William Fox disregarded the expense element in his aim to give Miss White the best picture she has yet made. The scenario was written by Max March and Paul H. Sloane, and Charles Gibby directed the picture.

890 SEEK INFORMATION ABOUT ROAD CONDITIONS

A gradual growth in the number of tourists who are seeking road information in Pendleton has been recorded during the past three weeks, according to Miss Mellie Parker, who is in charge of the office details of the work of the Oregon Tourist and Information Bureau.

During the week which closed Saturday there were persons from 890 cars who sought information as to the best roads to take in various directions from Pendleton. During the week before that the number was 810, while the week previous to that 695 called. These tourists are served by the service stations and from the office of the Pendleton Commercial Association.

Of the number who come to the office, Miss Parker estimates that about 40 per cent of the information as to the best way to get to the national parks, or to go on farther east. She accounts for this, however, on the score that information to those going west or north can usually be furnished by the service stations.

SENATOR CAPPER

fact that the primary gave the voters a chance to name their own choice instead of having a handpicked organization candidate forced on them is the best possible endorsement of the primary principle.

"If the people are not to have a voice in the nomination of their candidates for office, why should they have a voice in their election?"

"If popular elections are to stand, nominations by primary must stand."

"No other plan comes near to providing popular government."

Kansas As Example

"Take for instance my state before the time of state primaries. The conventions were dominated by the railroad, stockyard and liquor interests."

"These interests combined to control and did control the results in both Republican and Democratic conventions. They decided who the nominees should be in both parties."

"After that, the people could elect whichever nominee they choose. With their candidates hand-picked for them, they had no freedom of selection. Nominations for governors, legislators, even for Supreme Court justices, were directed by corporation influences, not by the free will of the people."

"Four times out of five, the primary is more important than the election. For in many states a minority party candidate has no chance whatever. The nominees of the majority party are assured of election."

"If the primary is eliminated, so the voter has no voice in the selection of his party's nominees, he has no voice in the election."

Fair for Poor Man

"It may be true there are times when a poor man is at a disadvantage under the primary system. But the nomination of Colonel Smith Brookhart in Iowa as a candidate for United States senator shows a man can be nominated without spending large sums of money—if he has the people's confidence and they want him."

"Secretary Weeks, it seems to me, out-Bolsheviked the Bolshevik in declaring popular government a failure."

"With all the unrest and discontent now current, this is a poor time to talk about taking from the people their primaries. Rather, we should be studying how to extend them."

"Not less popular government but more popular government is what we need."
