THE KING OF BOHEMIA DEAD

By JOHN O'BRIEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
PARIS (By Mail to United Press).—Bohemia is in mourning. It has lost its king. Adalbert Blaut de Thérassine, garbed in his khaki uniform, the gift of a demolished doughboy of the A. E. F., was buried in Pere-Lachaise. He had been king of the Bohemians for thirty years.

Every American who wandered through the Latin Quarter at any hour of the evening or night in the last three years must have caught a glimpse of this strange prototype of the heroes of Murgers, whose century has just been celebrated. Tall and gaunt, flashing eye despite his sixty years, unkempt but not unkempt, with the aristocratic bearing inherited from the noble Breton family to which he belonged, he was still a student, just as he was more than a generation ago.

He had been a writer on several Paris newspapers, but preferred to live his carefree life in his own kingdom. Why did he make the choice? Let him answer for himself.

"Now have I come to depend on my subjects for a meal or a bed?" he asked. "I know who I cannot explain. You begin by being the joyous Bohemian, the center of wild celebrations. You are the exponent of the 'I don't give a dam.' People like your wit, your devil-may-care existence. As you go a little farther than the others, you are swept up to the pinnacle of fame. Enthusiastic students proclaim you King of Bohemia and—you are forced to live up to the title.

"King Adalbert" was a friend of Paul Verlaine, the poet of decadence; Laurent Tailhade, the singer of the songs of anarchy. He wrote ironic and subtle articles for La Presse. He played on the stage in Brussels, Antwerp, Liege. He sold books on the Boulevard and peddled peanuts in the cafes frequented by Americans. He was a nightly visitor at the Pantheon. He was a frequenter of the Luxembourg and the Louvre.

He had a little income from his family. It usually lasted until the third of the month. On the first of the month he had a fashion of inven-

(ALL-OVER TOWN)

I enjoy the confidence of more young people about to be married than all the diaries.

But I don't keep them secret! No, sir, I just tell everybody in town about the things they want, and see to it that they get them.

If you're one of those happy ones and want anything from a Bungalow to a Caterer just call on me for a want ad.

Or if you've something to offer that'll interest these young folks, let me tell them about it for you.

ing all his creditors—he considered everybody to whom he owed more than one franc a creditor—to what he called a settling up banquet in one of the cafes frequented by students and there religiously paid up. Then for three days he was a real king, lavish and caring not for tomorrow. Years went by but every first of the month was the same for Adalbert.

Before the war he never asked for more than two sous. After the armistice, when the cost of living began to soar, he was constrained to increase his "earnings" and the tribute paid by his faithful subjects became ten sous. He was followed to his last lodging for the night by a crowd of students and ex-students who knew him in his early days.

FRENCHMAN CHEERED WILSON; SILENCED

PARIS. (By Mail to United Press).—Three years ago Paris frantically acclaimed Woodrow Wilson. Recently a lone admirer shouted "Long live Wilson" at a fourth of July celebration and came near being arrested.

The incident is reported as follows by "Bonsoir," an evening newspaper: "While Mr. Pench (President of the Municipal Council of Paris) was placing a wreath on the tomb of Washington, a man waving a little American flag shouted: 'Long live Wilson!' The onlookers turned at him in amazement. A policeman stepped up and told him to keep quiet. He complied."

LONDON.—Three jurymen in a recent murder trial at Parkhurst, Kent, were unable to sign the jury roll after their verdict had been given. They couldn't write.
