CLAIMS 'HARDEST' HEAD IN ARKANSAS

POPULAR BLEFF, Mo., Oct. 17.—Talk about ivory! Leo Reeves, of Walnut Ridge, Ark., claims to have the hardest head of anyone in Arkansas and then some. Reeves is known as "hard head" because of the resistance and resilience of his cranium. When Reeves gets into a tight place he uses his head. He thinks nothing of ramming his head through a door, breaking fifteen bottles on his head without a befuddling effect, or striking it with a hammer so long as it seems to amuse his spectators. In fact, he doesn't mind it a bit. Reeves thinks if he should fall out of the top of a skyscraper, just so he "hit" on his head, all would be popy.

BOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 17.—(U. P.)—The entire force of "El Universal", leading newspaper of Mexico City has gone on a strike because the editor-in-chief has been discharged, according to advices received here.

velt will be dedicated to his memory in the Park blocks here November 11. The original plan to dedicate the state on October 27, the famous statesman's birthday, was abandoned in favor of the scheme to have the unveiling on Armistice Day so that school children might practice without missing their classes.

The statue is an equestrian bronze on a granite base, and is the gift to the city of Dr. Henry Waldo Coe, friend and admirer of Roosevelt and a prominent Portlander.

Coe's gift is the first heroic statue to make Portland its home, and is one of the few original equestrian statues in the United States. It is the third character statue to be erected in Portland, the first being that of Sacajawea, the Indian girl guide of the Lewis and Clark expedition, the second copy of the Thomas Jefferson statue in Richmond, now on the campus of the Jefferson night school here.
