"Every snag in the middle west has some fruit on it especially apples this year," says W. A. Wallace, prominent east end resident, who is here today enroute home from Iowa. While away Mr. Wallace took orders for apples but says the mid-west crop is so heavy that the demand for northwest apples is cut down. On his trip he was accompanied by Mrs. Wallace. They are the parents of George and DeWitt Wallace, local Studebaker dealers.

P. L. Campbell, president of the University of Oregon, who was a visitor here yesterday for the football game, is an enthusiastic Round-Up fan. President Campbell, after seeing the Round-Up this year declared that Oregon and the whole Northwest should support the annual pageant. He believes that the Round-Up needs only to be more widely known to hold as significant a place in relation to history as do the major European festivals and community plays which attract visitors from all over the world.

G. H. Foster, who has been in Pendleton for several months training hunting dogs, returned to Portland yesterday. Mr. Foster trained dogs owned by Portland, Heppner, Pendleton, Helix and Salem men. The dogs numbered 40 and the majority were Llanellen setters, although there were a few pointers. Mr. Foster reports a very successful season and says the dogs are making a good showing in pheasant hunting. He spent two months on the Guy Wyrick ranch where he trained the dogs. He states that it is no small undertaking to train 40 animals, and Mr. Foster's work began at 4:30 a. m. each day. A brace of dogs were trained at a time. All the dogs have been returned to their owners. A few local sportsmen bought dogs from Mr. Foster.

THEATRES

ARCADE SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Not shooting the scenes in foothills nearby the studio as a matter of convenience, but in the actual region in which the story is laid, has been responsible for making "Man's Law and God's," a Finis Fox Production, starring Jack Livingston and Ethel Shannon, at the Arcade Theatre Sunday and Monday scenically one of the most enchanting pictures which ever graced the silver sheet.

RIVOLI SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Those who believe that the dance hall-gambling resorts of Alaska and the far north are all of rotund hewn construction, entirely lacking in the gorgeous and elaborate, will be surprised when the truth is revealed in a mammoth casino setting built for Irvin Willat's new production for Paramount, "The Siren Call," featuring Dorothy Dalton, which will be on view at the Rivoli theatre Sunday and Monday.

THE ANSWER MAN
By the Rivoli Manager
Fact Seeker—Irvin Willat directed "The Grim Game," "Behind the Door" and "Below the Surface." His latest production is "The Siren Call," which we are presenting Sunday.

D. D. Fan—You say you like Dorothy Dalton so much that you could see her every week. Well, cheer up, she is due here Sunday in "The Siren Call," a colorful thrill picture of the northwest. You will enjoy it.

Traveler—David Powell was for a time in Europe, and appeared in several Paramount pictures there. But now he is back in the United States, thus accounting for his better looking man to Dorothy Dalton in "The Siren Call," which picture, by the way, we are going to screen Sunday.

H. C. G. Jr.—Mitchell Lewis recently appeared with Betty Compton in "At the End of the World," a Paramount picture. But you will see him again Sunday with Dorothy Dalton in "The Siren Call," in which he plays the part of a Canuck trapper. In the near future he will also be seen with Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt in "On the High Seas," a circle photoplay of the sea.

Writer—No, "The Siren Call," our attraction for Sunday, was never published as a novel. It is an original, written especially for the star by J. E. Nash, one of the scenario writers at the Famous Players-Lasky Studio in Hollywood. Mr. Nash has built a story packed with heart interest and thrills.

Artist—One can hardly blame you for your interest in motion picture photography especially when the subject deals so much with the rugged outdoors as does "The Siren Call." In this case the cameraman was C. E. Schoelbaum, a veteran photographer and advance notices regarding his work in the current picture are enthusiastic.

Authentic—Dorothy Dalton scored her first triumph as a screen player in "The Flame of the Yukon." In her forthcoming Paramount picture, "The Siren Call," she has a similar role and we are confident that her role in this picture will outshine any other which she has interpreted.

Gertrude G.—Since you know the names of the three leading players in "The Siren Call," here are the remaining members of its cast: Edward J. Brady, Will B. Walling, Leigh Wyatt, Lucien Littlefield and Guy Oliver, all of whom are prominent in Paramount pictures.

Actor—The recently formed Paramount Stock Company of players includes every star and player of prominence of the screen. The new policy of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation with regard to this company means casts of unequalled merit, while two or more stars will hereafter be seen in the same pictures. "The Siren Call," in which Dorothy Dalton is featured and David Powell and Mitchell Lewis are the leading support, illustrates the policy in its best form.

RIVOLI TODAY
Wealthy and orphaned, Lydia Thorne is a speed maniac and constantly craving for excitement. She narrowly escapes death by speeding into the path of a locomotive and shatters the gates, for which complaint is made against her by the watchman to Dan O'Bannon, the district attorney.

O'Bannon decides to punish her and she dares him to come to her home that evening while she is holding a birthday party, and collect the fine. He goes and arrives just as Lydia is auctioning a kiss to her masculine guests. Bobby Dorset and former governor Stephen Albee, her most persistent suitors, are the most interested bidders. O'Bannon refuses to bid. Lydia treats him with scorn.

Lydia's maid, Evans, has a child who is seriously ill. Having no money to treat her boy, she steals Lydia's jewels which are missed the next day. O'Bannon hears her story and he begs Lydia to intercede in her behalf, and she consents to have Evans released on probation. That night, Lydia drinks to excess at a party at which Dorset and Albee are present. O'Bannon arrives to tell Lydia that Evans will be sentenced the next day. O'Bannon is moved to liken the affair to ancient Rome, and for the moment they appear as Roman bacchant in full swing, with Lydia as the Patrician hostess and Dorset and Albee as her lieutenants. There is a gladiatorial combat and as they watch, they are brought back to the present by the picture of two young girls boxing in a regulation ring for the entertainment of Lydia's faded guests.

Lydia neglects to go to court the next morning and Evans is sent to prison. She forfeits O'Bannon's friendship and the two quarrel. While speeding on the highway, Lydia is arrested by Drummond, a motorcycle policeman.
