SALARIES PAID BALL PLAYERS NOT SO HIGH AS REPORTED, MEN SAY

News Story Figures and Pay Checks are Not Same for Stars, Several of Them Say.

BY HENRY L. GARRETT (United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(U. P.)—Ideas that the public has about the huge salaries paid to baseball players are exaggerated and far from correct, according to several prominent players.

In the activities leading up to the organization of the player's union, the wide variance between the money actually paid to the players and the salary the public believed they were drawing was surprising, the leaders among the players maintain.

Rube Ruth, for instance, is generally supposed to be drawing $75,000, whereas it is said he is getting not much more than one-half of this amount.

During the trial of the "Black Sox" players, it was surprising the rather nominal salary drawn by star players, who were considered to be among the highest salaried players in the game.

One of the pitching stars of the recent world's series was said to be working on a $2,500 a year contract when he was released by one club.

Some of the big stars are drawing salaries commensurate with their playing ability and their attraction at the gate, but the general run of salaries paid to the ordinary players is not anything near what the public thinks. Club owners do not make a practice of opening their books and showing their payroll. Perhaps they are not responsible for allowing the dopsters to figure out what the players should be getting. In justice to them it would seem they are guilty only in that they do not correct the false impressions and that would be bad business.

Dr. Billy Bull, Yale scout and kicking coach, in line of duty has to go around and get the low down on all the teams on the Ells schedule. In years of experience his opinion of a player should bear weight.

"George Owen, the Harvard half-back, is the greatest back in college football history. He can do more things well than any other back I have ever seen," he says.

These who have recollections of Thomas, Cops, Ginn and other greats may differ with the doctor but coaches who have visited Harvard in the last two years and observed Owen in action will agree if he is not the greatest, he is surely one of them.

Football is becoming a sport of tremendous public appeal. When five major games in the middle of the season will draw 228,000 spectators, there is something to the game.

In addition to the spectacle offered by the college atmosphere, the color and the rooting, there is a growing understanding among the fans of the tremendous "heart" in the player.

Mallory, the Yale halfback, one of the greatest defensive players in the game gave an exhibition to the "sameness" that makes football in the contest against the Army.

Although he was carrying seven nice holes and more motion was the source of terrific pain, he went into the game just after the start when Scott, his substitute had been knocked out.

Mallory played through the entire game and when the pile cleared he was generally on the bottom. Anyone who ever had a boil, anyone who ever played football, knows that they don't come much gamier than that.

ENGLAND TO BUILD BIG SPORT STADIUM

World's biggest sports arena

Here is the Imperial Stadium at Wembley 450 ft. as it will appear when completed in time for the next Cup Final in the spring of 1923.

The Stadium has been spoken of as "one of the side shows" of the British empire exhibition, to be opened in 1924. If the great sports arena in the world, with accommodation for 125,000 persons, is a "side show," what will the exhibition be, with its backing of millions of empire capital and empire enterprise?

Reinforced concrete and steel work have been largely used in the structure of this huge stadium, which will accommodate 125,000 spectators, every one of whom will be able to have an unobstructed view of the field of play.

A quarter-mile running track, circles the playing field, and a straight, 229 yards dash, which will be the only one of its kind in Europe, is being laid out in front of the Royal box.

Numerous features, hitherto unknown at English sports grounds, such as a wireless observation tower, a first aid station, a telephone exchange connecting up every part of the arena, dressing rooms of unsurpassed dimensions, showers, a restaurant and a buffet capable of accommodating 2,000 men are continuously employed.

The committee of management is planning an ambitious program, and hopes to make the ground a permanent center of the great national and international contests in the future. One of their schemes is to try to get permission to hold the Olympic games there in 1928 or 1932.

Work has been proceeding on the ground day and night for nearly a year and it is expected by the architects that it will be completed in time for the Football Cup final, which corresponds to the world's series, in the spring of next year.

MANY ATHLETES TO MEET FOR OLYMPICS

BY FREDERIC K. ARDRETT (International News Service Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The Olympic Games of 1924 will bring together the largest contingent of international athletes the world has ever seen. Mr. Allan Muhr, of Philadelphia, secretary of the English Olympic club, told International News Service, "I have just returned from America. I have been assured that the United States will send three hundred men."

South American countries, such as Argentina, Chile and Brazil, that have never before been represented in Olympic Games will send large teams to Paris. A Chinese representation of over 100 will be on hand, as well as a team of Japanese soccer players. The Japs will be seen for the first time on the soccer field, and Nippon is putting forth great efforts to make its team winners. There will be no less than sixty soccer teams contending for honors.

The running track at the new stadium in Colombes, two miles out of Paris, is receiving special attention, and the promoters promise to make it the fastest track in Europe. It is larger than any track in the United States—553 yards around. This makes it possible to run the quarter in one turn. There are six lanes for the sprints, each four feet wide.

Greatest Stadium The field is 170 yards by 112. Included here are four high and broad jumps, shot pits and pole vaults, as well as two hammer, javelin and discus throws.

Sixty thousand spectators will be accommodated. For the first time on an athletic field all seating sections will be entirely covered. Therefore rain, so common in Paris, will not interfere with carrying on the events. The swimming pool, adjoining the field, is to be 150 feet long and 80 feet wide. There will be places for 1,000 people to watch the aquatic events. Eight tennis courts will be constructed, five for the prelims and three in the center for the finals.

If sufficient guarantee can be had from the competitors small houses will be built for their use, enabling the athletes to be near the scene of their activities, where they may try out at will. The rent will be minimum, to save expenses for the respective teams.

Electric Trains The Chemin de Fer de l'Etat, whose tracks serve the town of Colombes, where the stadium is being created, has promised that the line will be electrified in time for the games. Trains will be run into special terminals, with direct communication with the tribunes.

The International Federation of Sports has entire charge of the general management of the events. The judges and referees of each event will be appointed by the federation.

JAP ROYAL TROUSSEAU WILL BE VERY SIMPLE

TOKYO, Nov. 21.—(A. P.)—The wedding trousseau of Princess Nagako, the future Empress of Japan, already has been completed in Kyoto. The selection of colors and patterns was made by the empress herself, who aimed at the beauty of simplicity and avoiding gorgeousness, paid special attention to the matching of colors.

One of the gowns is of white silk, made of broad chenille and embroidered with a peacock design. Another will be of rose silk woven in wide width such as the authorities are trying to induce Japanese women to adopt to promote the weaving industry and foreign exportation; a third kimono is of eel-rod color embroidered with marigold leaves. The crest of the empress. The two others are pale blue with chrysanthemum patterns and cream color with a wave design.

There was a rumor in local papers that the princess would wear a white foreign dress at her wedding. But this would be an unheard of departure from all traditions and as for the occasion, the dresses to be worn at the ceremony will be the ancient Japanese kimono. The princess, however, may wear foreign evening dress at banquets.

According to Japanese customs, girls belonging to the nobility may get married in the old ceremonial dress with a stiff divided skirt trailing on the ground, a set of kimono, and a hand some court coat. They wear their hair hanging down and hold a short sword in their hands. The father also wears the old court dress with a small black cap.

The regular wedding dress is of white silk with the mourning color in Japan. It is worn at the ceremony of the drinking of sake "three times three" which constitutes the wedding ceremony and is performed in the family circle only. The bride wears the mourning color as a sign that she leaves her home forever for that of her husband. At the banquet she wears kimono with long sleeves and during the course of the dinner changes these three times, each time exhibiting a dress of different color and pattern.

NOTED JURIST TO RETIRE TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 21.—(A. P.)—Judge J. W. Lusk who founded one of the first juvenile courts in the land here in 1907—shortly before Judge Lee Lindsey established his famous court in Denver—will soon retire after a 36-year career in the public service.

The veteran judge, who is almost 60 years of age, once was mayor of Tacoma, after holding federal and state positions in Indiana before coming west.

His room for years here flattered about Judge Lusk's office in the court house seems to obtain the best he could to give them every day.

Enterprising business men in New Brunswick, N. J., have seen the advertising possibilities in the "fall murder." Here are specimens of signs erected for the double purpose of guiding motor visitors and securing publicity.
